IMPORTANT TELEGRAPHIC ARRANGEMENTS.

I WISH to call close attention to a new departure in my business, which is of the utmost importance to country dealers. I have made arrangements with the Post-office for a direct wire into my own offices, thus saving some ten to twenty minutes on messages. I need hardly point out the advantages to customers dealing at a distance, who are thus put in actual contact with my offices from every part of the United Kingdom. Thus a message sent from

MY CITY OFFICES to MANCHESTER is DELIVERED in FIVE MINUTES.

JOHN SHAW.

Bankers—The London and County Banking Company (Limited), 21, Lombard-street, E.C.
Secretary—James Anderson, Esq.
Offices—61, Moorgate-street, E.C.

The River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited), No. 61, Moorgate-street, London, offer for subscription 11,350 shares of £20 each (£227,000), part of the share capital of £400,000 of the Montevideo Waterworks Company (Limited), of which 2,400 shares represent the unissued capital of the company, and the remaining [illegible] shares are the property of the River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited), being part of the assets taken over by them from the Mercantile Bank of the River Plate (Limited), in liquidation.

Price par, payable as follows:

£1 0 0 per Share on application.
£3 0 0 " on allotment.
£16 0 0 " on 31st December, 1888.
£20 0 0

The shares now offered will be entitled to the full dividend for the current year (1888).

Subscribers can pay up their shares in full on allotment, in which case a rebate will be allowed at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. After the final instalment has been paid the shares will be issued to them, either by direct allotment or by transfer, and in the latter case free of expense.

Applications can be made on the form accompanying the prospectus, and lodged at the London and County Banking Company (Limited), 21, Lombard-street, London, with a deposit of £1 per share on the number of shares applied for.

If no allotment be made the amount paid on application will be returned in full. If default be made in payment of any of the instalments, the amounts previously paid will be liable to forfeiture.

The Montevideo Waterworks were opened in 1871, and were acquired by the existing company in 1879.

The water is supplied from the River Santa Lucia, about 35 miles from Montevideo (being the nearest point at which a good supply of water could be obtained), and is thence pumped about [illegible] miles to the service reservoirs at Las Piedras, about 10 miles from Montevideo, from which it is distributed to the city by gravitation.

The population of Montevideo is about 160,000, and the number of houses about 20,000, of which not more than about 7,767 are as yet served by the company, thus showing a large field for further development.

The steady growth of the company's operations is shown by the following facts:

1. From 1883 to 1887 the number of services increased from 4,771 to 7,[illegible].
2. For the first eight months of the current year (1888) there was an increase of 353 in the number of services.
3. The manager reports he has received orders to lay on supply to 650 new houses on one building estate alone.
4. A second delivery main has just been laid all the way from Las Piedras to Montevideo, and filtering beds and storage reservoirs are under construction at the company's intake at Santa Lucia, and are expected to be completed within the next six months.

These important additions to the company's works will greatly improve the service, and cannot fail to add to the revenue.

The great distance of the source of supply having necessitated an unusually heavy expenditure, the National Government of Uruguay granted to the undertaking a subvention of $55,000 = £11,730 per annum for the term of the exclusive concession, which expires in 1891, after which the works will continue the property of the company.

Experience has shown that competition is practically impossible as regards the water supply of large towns, and more especially would that be so where the distance of the service supply is so exceptionally great, as in this case, and where the water has to be pumped from the intake to the service reservoirs.

The following tabular statement shows the balance of net income (including the Government subvention) for the past five years, after providing for working expenses and administration charges, viz.:

	Net Income.	Dividend on Share Capital.	Annual Addition to Reserve.
1883	£[illegible]	[illegible] per cent.	£[illegible]
1884	£[illegible]	[illegible] per cent.	£[illegible]
1885	£[illegible]	[illegible] per cent.	£[illegible]
1886	£[illegible]	[illegible] per cent.	£[illegible]
1887	£[illegible]	5 per cent.	£12,000
			£32,000

It will be seen that the amount (£12,000) placed to reserve for 1887 exceeded the amount of the Government subvention for that year (£11,730), and that consequently the dividend of 5 per cent. was earned out of ordinary income.

Waterworks shares, when the net income has been proved by actual experience, are regarded as sound investments, as shown by the high prices they maintain in the official list, and especially is that so where, as in this case, there is every prospect of future development.

The company has, since its formation, in 1879, entered into various contracts, of which it would be practically impossible to give the particulars required by section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. Applicants must therefore waive the right to a specification of the dates and names of the parties to contracts.

The concession, the memorandum and articles of association, and the last report and balance sheet of the company, can be seen at the company's office, No. 61, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

Prospectuses can be had at the offices of the company, and of the River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited), both of 61, Moorgate-street, London, E.C., and of the London and County Banking Company (Limited), 21, Lombard-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

Messrs. Martin and Co., Bankers, and their agents in Paris, Messrs. J. Allard et Cie, bankers, will receive subscriptions on behalf of this company, which has been formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of cab proprietors and jobmasters in Paris, and ultimately, if deemed advisable, at other of the principal towns in the Republic of France.

Visitors to Paris cannot fail to be surprised at the heavy, uncomfortable, and ugly public vehicles plying for hire, and above all the inferior class of horses in the French metropolis. Residents and the French Press both join in this general chorus of complaint.

Having regard to the increasing number of English and American visitors to Paris and the enormous influx of visitors expected at the approaching Universal Exhibition of 1889, the present time is considered most opportune for effectually and substantially establishing the sound working of this company's undertaking.

It is the intention of the directors to use English horses only.

The scheme of the company has been very favourably received by many people in Paris, and the Prefecture has already approved of it, and granted the required authorisation to set on foot this most promising enterprise.

The cabs will be built by Messrs. Forder Bros. and Co., of Long-acre, London, and Wolverhampton.

A very careful estimate of the profit to be made on 200 cabs has been made by the directors, which can be seen at the offices of the company. The result shows, after payment of all expenses and the utmost allowance for depreciation in value of stock and plant, a dividend of 16 per cent. per annum. It is obvious that a higher dividend could be declared after taking into consideration the profits to be derived from the sale of the [illegible] types.

No directors' fees will be drawn, but their remuneration left entirely in the hands of the shareholders to be voted at the general meeting.

The contracts may be inspected at the offices of the solicitors to the company, and prospectuses, memorandum, and articles of association may be obtained of the secretary to the company.

Should no allotment be made, deposits will be returned in full.

Full prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained of the solicitors, of the bankers, and at the offices of the company.

27th October, 1888.

THE NAMAQUA COPPER COMPANY (Limited). Notice is Hereby Given that, at a meeting of the directors held this day, It was resolved—"That a dividend of 5s. per share be, and is, hereby, declared payable to the shareholders registered in the books of the company on the 13th day of November, and to holders of share warrants to bearer, and that the same be payable on the 20th day of November. The warrant for the dividend upon the registered shares will be forwarded by post on the evening of the 19th inst." Holders of share warrants to bearer will receive payment of the interim dividend on presentation of Coupon No. 2, either at the Company's Office in London, or at the Credit Lyonnais, in Paris. Coupons for payment in London must be left two clear days previously for examination, and must be listed upon the company's printed forms obtainable at the company's office. They can be deposited on and after the 16th inst. Coupons presented in Paris will be paid at the current rate of exchange.—By order of the Board, C. LEWIS BENNETT, Secretary. Office of the Company, 36, Leadenhall-buildings, Gracechurch-street, London, E.C., 13th November, 1888.

MONEY MARKET.

TUESDAY EVENING.

As anticipated, about £600,000 in notes from Russia was sent into the Bank of England to-day, and discounts were easier, three months' bills being negotiated at 3 per cent. or a little less. Six months' were quoted 2¾, but no business was reported. The supply of paper generally is extremely limited, although finance drafts for large sums, drawn against recent loans, are in circulation. There was a decided plethora of money; advances for the day were obtained as low as ¾, 1 per cent., and, to cover the settlement, at 1½, 2. Apart from the reflux of notes, the market has been affected by the repayment of money to the banks by the Stock Exchange, owing to the important reduction in the speculative account for a rise. New loans, however, are known to be impending, and a further heavy amount of gold is expected to be soon withdrawn from the Bank for South America, the estimate ranging from £400,000 to £800,000. And the German exchange has declined to a point which is likely to be quickly followed by outside purchases of bullion for Berlin. It is assumed, however, that the minimum may be shortly reduced, especially as the Bank is still taking bills at 3 per cent. or less. At the same time the 5 per cent. rate is pressing severely upon many foreign establishments, which allow 1 per cent. below official terms for deposits. One effect of a reduction in the rate to 4 per cent. would doubtless be the disappearance of a good deal of money that is now helping to depress quotations. The joint-stock banks are also giving 3½ per cent. for some millions of deposits, thereby involving a serious loss in the present condition of the market. But the chief factor is the loss of gold by the national institution, and the directors may avoid a downward movement with the prospect of a further important efflux, although the present minimum is virtually inoperative.

Dealings on the Stock Exchange were again mainly confined to the settlement, which will be finished to-morrow. Money was superabundant, yet an almost general fall occurred in prices, the markets being generally affected by a heavy collapse in "Americans," due to the unexpected news that the Eastern trunk lines have reduced their freight rates to an important extent, amounting in some cases to about one-third. Recently all these securities were largely bought on this side, in view of a decided recovery in trade in the States after the Presidential election, and the present "cut" has been arranged at a very inopportune moment, although it is shrewdly suspected that the chief object of American operators is to obtain cheap stock here. The principal movement was in Lake Shores, these being 3½ lower. Erie, Louisville, New York Centrals, Atlantic Firsts, Northern Pacific Preference, and Union Pacifics were also extremely flat, and relapsed 1 to 2. The final quotations were about the worst, sales being still pressed by recent speculative buyers. Grand Trunk Preferences and Guaranteed declined 1 to 2½, while the Ordinary was down about ⅞. The depression extended to Canadian Pacifics and Mexican railroads, but Nitrate and Central Argentine stocks were in request, at an improvement. The rise in the latter amounted to 3 per cent. Some of the "heavy" English lines exhibited firmness, partly in anticipation of the issue of good traffic returns for the past week, while Hull and Barnsley, North-Eastern, and South-Eastern "A" declined.

Consols rose 1-16 per cent. on the ease in money. Foreign bonds, however, gave way, chiefly in response to the receipt of lower prices from the Bourses. Egyptian, Greek, Hungarian, Peruvian, Russian, Spanish, Turkish, and Venezuelan were all down. On the other hand, Uruguayan, Guatemala, and Chilian improved. There was likewise an inquiry for Dutch Two and a Half and Three and a Half per Cents., which rose 1 to 2. The prominent feature in the miscellaneous department was the demand for Nitrate shares, especially Primitiva. Dock stocks advanced, and Suez Canal receded. As regards mines, copper and diamond securities were lower, but Transvaal gold were bought at an advance.

The Hawarden Castle, from the Cape, has brought £18,162 in specie.

Bar silver, Mexican dollars, and Rupee Paper were inactive, and without alteration. Cable Transfers in Bombay declined 1-32d, to 1s 4 15-32d, and bills in Shanghai ¼, to 4s 3[illegible]d.

Messrs. Sharps and Wilkins report as follows on the bullion market:

The amount of silver that has been offering during this fortnight has been on a moderate scale, and notwithstanding that purchases have been made both on Indian and Continental account the price of this metal has at no time improved more than 1-16d per oz on standard above our last quotation of 43d. The market has again declined to this latter figure, and closes dull at the quotation. Mexican dollars have been in short supply, and have been in good demand at 42d per oz. This price still remains the nearest nominal quotation. There have been some considerable withdrawals of sovereigns for South America, and there is also a demand for bar gold for shipment to India.

Renewed heaviness was observable on the Continental Bourses. At Berlin Egyptian Unified, Russian, and several others receded, and the rouble fell 1¼. In Paris there was a decline in Credit Foncier, Ottoman Bank, Suez Canal, Panama, and Greek. The Three per Cent. Rentes remained at 83f, and the Four and a Half per Cent. relapsed 2½c, to 104f 65c. Exchange on London (cheques) was ½c lower, at 25f 30½c.

On 'Change a considerable recovery occurred in the rouble, in anticipation of the early introduction of a new Russian loan. Bills on France and Belgium were in good demand.

The Great Eastern Railway traffic return for the past week exhibits an increase of £2,576; the Metropolitan District an increase of £110; and the Lancashire and Yorkshire a decrease of £1,241.

Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. are prepared to deliver part paid Scrip Certificates of the City of Montreal Three per Ct. Loan in exchange for letters of allotment.

After providing for all interest and other charges and adding £1,876 to the fund for the renewal of building and plant, the annual report of the Montevideo Gas Company (Limited) exhibits an available balance of £31,301. The directors recommend a dividend at the rate of 5 per ct. on the share capital, leaving, after the addition of £12,000 to the special reserve fund £2,321 to be carried forward.

The Consul-General for Paraguay has notified to the Council of Foreign Bondholders that he has received the remittance for the payment of the coupon due Jan. 1, 1889, on the Paraguay Bonds of 1886.

R. Goldsbrough and Co. (Limited) have received a cablegram from their Melbourne office, dated Nov. 8, that the company's total sales in the colonies to date amounted to 31,510 bales wool.

The total traffic receipts of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway from July 1 to Nov. 4 amounted to £471,[illegible], as compared with £[illegible] from July 1 to Nov. 6, 1887; while the total expenses were £[illegible], as against £[illegible]. The receipts and expenses for the corresponding period of 1887 include two days more than the current period. In order to make a correct comparison for an equal number of days, the figures for the two days named should be added to those above shown for 1888, which may be estimated at £11,000 for receipts and £5,500 for expenses. Allowing for the extra days, the receipts show a decrease of £377 and the expenses an increase of £20,[illegible], making a reduction of £20,[illegible] in the net revenue to date, and a loss on the fortnight's working of £5,[illegible].

A cablegram received by the Consolidated Company of Bultfontein (Limited) states that the income for October was £26,500, and the expenditure £17,500. There were 189,000 loads of blue on the floors.

The Mexican Railway traffic receipts for the week ended Nov. 10 amounted to £[illegible], against £[illegible] last year, showing an increase of £1,700. For the first week in November the New York, Ontario, and Western Railway gross earnings were $[illegible], being $812 less than in 1887. The Chicago, St. Paul, and Kansas City Railroad receipts for the week ended Nov. 7 amounted to $[illegible], against $[illegible] last year. It is added: "Owing to election only five working days." For the first week in November the Cincinnati, Washington, and Baltimore Railway traffic receipts were $[illegible], or $[illegible] less than last year.

For the past week the tramway traffic returns show the following differences: Increases—London, £130; North Metropolitan, £[illegible]; London Street, £110; Provincial, £[illegible]; Belfast, £[illegible]; London Southern, £[illegible]; Woolwich and South-East London, £13; Bristol, £[illegible]; North London, £[illegible]; West Metropolitan, £[illegible]; North Staffordshire £[illegible]; Imperial, £[illegible]; Sunderland, £[illegible]; Swansea, £[illegible]; Edinburgh, £[illegible]; Calcutta, £[illegible]; France, £[illegible]; and Continental Metropolitan, £[illegible]. Decreases—Southampton, £10; Southwark and Deptford, £[illegible]; Burnley, £[illegible]; Hull, £[illegible]; Stockton and Darlington, £[illegible]; Dublin, £[illegible]; Germany, £[illegible]; Gothenburg, £[illegible]; South London, £[illegible]; and Calais, £[illegible]. The Tramways Union receipts for Oct. were £7,[illegible], against £7,[illegible] last year.

It is announced by the Day Dawn Block and Wyndham Gold Mining Company (Limited) that the result of the crushing for the fortnight ending Nov. 10 is as follows: "[illegible] tons crushed; yield of gold, [illegible]oz; approximate value, £1,110; fortnight's expenses, £1,312; crushing with ten head of stamps; rest of mill defective; heavy expenses due to development."

The Viola Company (Limited) have received the following cable from the mine for the week ending Nov. 10: "Ore smelted, [illegible] tons; lead produced, [illegible] tons; silver produced, 2,[illegible]oz; approximate gross value, $[illegible]; lead, $[illegible]."

Letters of allotment and regret of the Smyrna and Cassaba Railway Company's issue of £500,000 Five per Ct. Redeemable Debentures have been posted, as well as letters of allotment to applicants for shares in Crompton and Co. (Limited). The list of applications for the debentures and shares of the [illegible] Company (Limited), was closed this afternoon at four o'clock, except for country applications by first post to-morrow (Wednesday). The application list for shares in the Elephant and Castle Horse and Carriage Repository (Limited) will close to-morrow (Wednesday) for town, and the following day for the country.

According to advices received by the Javali Company (Limited), 400 tons of quartz were crushed during the month of September, producing 273oz of gold, or an average of 13dwt 15gr per ton, valued at £725. The cost at the mine was £[illegible].

The Dickens Custer Company (Limited) have received advices that bars 65 to 70 have been sold for $[illegible]. A cable received to-day states that during October 750 tons were crushed, yielding $17,000 in gold and 15,000oz in silver. Bars 71 to 73 had been disposed of for $12,405. These figures are subject to the [illegible].

It is intimated that the Leopard's Vlei Estate and Gold Mining Company (Limited) have received two bars of gold, weighing 276oz, representing the September crushings.

AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.

The correspondence which has recently passed between the representatives of the British and German Governments was yesterday presented to both Houses of Parliament. On the 3rd inst. the Marquis of Salisbury received from Count Hatzfeldt, the German Ambassador in London, a note setting forth that "the Imperial Government propose to her Majesty's Government to blockade, in common with and with the consent of the Sultan of Zanzibar, the coasts of East Africa forming part of the territory of that Sovereign, in order to suppress the exportation of slaves and the importation of arms and munitions of war." Lord Salisbury, on the 5th inst., conveyed the assent of her Majesty's Government to this proposal; and, in communicating the correspondence to Sir Edward Malet, the British Ambassador in Berlin, his lordship observes: "It is possible that too large a share in the rising of the coast tribes against the German Company is attributed to the slave traders. Much of it is, no doubt, due to the errors which have been committed by the German Company themselves. Their experience of Oriental habits and character has been insufficient, and in the measures they have taken they have allowed too little for the difference between the conditions to which they are accustomed in Europe and those with which they have had to deal on the African coast. But though much may be said, and said with justice, of the evil results of their precipitate action, and of their disregard of native character and religious customs, I am disposed to think there is considerable foundation for the belief that the apprehensions and the resentments of the slave traders have been a potent cause of the disturbances which have taken place." His lordship adds: "The request of the German Government is too much in harmony with the policy which Great Britain has uniformly pursued to be refused by us. Even if there were no special motive for acceding to it, we should welcome the assistance of a powerful nation like that of Germany in the enterprise which this country has pursued through good and evil report, and at the cost of great sacrifices, for three-quarters of a century. But there has been, in the present instance, a special reason which has weighed heavily with her Majesty's Government in inducing them to comply with the wishes of the German Government in this matter. It has been possible, in view of the present exigencies, to remove for the first time the most formidable obstacle which exists to the suppression of the present slave trade, namely, the refusal of France to agree to a mutual right of search. The French Government, though unwilling to grant the right of search on all occasions and in all cases, has consented that it shall be looked upon as one of the incidents of a blockade."

THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

On the whole it was an interesting day, beginning with a "document," and ending with the startling evidence of the two habitual "Moonlighters" who have turned informers. The President opened the proceedings with a careful and very lucid statement concerning the vexed question touching the admission of evidence as to "reports." The fact that a report had been made by a person as part of his duty was held to be admissible as evidence; but the contents of the report should not necessarily be taken as evidence of the facts contained therein. Having also settled another matter touching the contents of the "box," the President calmly referred to the fact that he had received a threatening letter, and Sir Charles Russell stated that his correspondence included similar unpleasant documents. When Mr. Bucknell, Q.C., had made an effort to climb up to a locus standi on behalf of Lord Clanricarde, "acting under his advice," and had been disposed of, a new witness, Patrick Kennedy, was taken up by Mr. Atkinson to tell the story of his wrongs and his boycotting. The Irish Q.C. has a slow, sure, steady method, and advances to such points as threats, notices, and outrages with cautious composure. When he had built up his case the witness was handed over to Sir Charles Russell. Kennedy is a thick-set, bullet-headed, closely-cropped man of the dogged type of the all but impenetrable Irish witness—fencing when he can, answering one question with another, and when fairly driven into a corner running to earth like a fox or a badger, and taking refuge in a stolid silence—as realised by Kennedy, from the dark depths of whose retreat not even the probing questions and severe searching manner of his eminent cross-examining countryman could, so to speak, dig him out. Evidently he looked on Sir Charles with profound suspicion, and met him more than once with a blunt "I object to the question." He wouldn't tell where he lived, and when he finally admitted to living in the County Galway, and was pressed again and again with the query "Where?" he said "In Ireland," as if suggesting that Sir Charles was possibly under the delusion that the County Galway was in Asia Minor. "What were you living on?" was another example, and there was a point in the question, so after much tedious hesitancy and anything but brilliant flashes of silence Kennedy woke up as from a trance and put it to Sir Charles, "How can I tell; was it the wind I was living on?" a poetical answer evidently unsatisfactory to the Court. "Do you hear my question?" "I do." "Then answer it"—and the answer was silence. Kennedy obviously considered what might be the likely effect of any particular answer on himself personally and the whole question at issue before he replied. He was wide-awake and alert all the same, for once when he thought counsel had slipped in a date he shouted out fiercely, "I didn't say 1880; I said 'aitey-wan,'" a retort which Sir Charles answered with a bland regret that the witness should contradict him so rudely. The strong point pressed was as to whether he had been all along in communication with the police, and a fair specimen of his answering was the reply to the question, "Have you communicated to the police?" which ran "I didn't tell them half what passed." In vain Sir Charles most emphatically said, "Attend, Kennedy!" and the President frowned severely, until finally it was intimated to the witness that he was treating neither Court nor counsel with proper respect. Mr. Lockwood fared little better. Pressing for the names of the police with whom the witness had spoken, he made a close study of the carpenter's work on the stand until the President broke in sharply with "We can't wait all day for the answer; it is a very simple question," whereupon the heavy brows were lifted to their lordships, and with apparent sincerity he gave the name of Sergeant Hennessy, having long before this admitted to a conversation with that officer. So the matter dragged slowly on. Mr. Biggar elicited the very sensible remark that "a man should not allow his land to lie idle," in answer to a question touching the popularity of land-grabbing, and finally, when there was a difficulty—indeed an absolute dead-lock—the Attorney-General came to the rescue, produced in Court the solicitor, Mr. Shannon, who had taken his evidence, and behold the ice was broken, the pent-up eloquence burst forth in reply to Sir Richard, whom Kennedy obviously looked upon as a friend, and, as the baffled Mr. Lockwood laughingly put it, "The sight of my learned friend has evidently an exhilarating effect upon him." With this the monotonous chorus of "Where?" "When?" "How?" and the "ten bars rest" that invariably succeeded these phrases, came to a relieving end, and a couple of intelligent policemen filled up the time until the sorely-tried Court and the audience, that included the often-mentioned Mr. Matt. Harris, Colonel Nolan, and Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett, rose for luncheon.

In the afternoon, as recorded, two new characters came on the scene. James Manion, short, swarthy, and of what is generally known as the Irish-American type, wearing that most unusual ornament for an Irish peasant, a thick black moustache, with the rest of the face clean shaven, and addicted to the use of the expression "I guess," came to boldly swear he was not merely a Land Leaguer, but a Fenian, and had taken the oath of that secret society. It was quite natural that Sir Charles should ask him "on view" if he had ever been in America, but it appeared this was the first time he had ever been out of Ireland. Of strange oaths, of moonlight meetings, of signs and passwords he told us, and especially of gatherings held at the house of "one Mrs. Walshe"—that name being always pronounced "Welch" in Ireland, a hint to English counsel by the way—who appears, if Manion is to be believed, to have kept a sort of small conspiracy shop for the manufacture of murder. With an audacity that certainly stirred one member of the Court he told how he and six others, including Pat Walshe, "the boy who was hung for Lyden afterwards," went out to shoot that unhappy man, but "did not get the chance that time." A new verb was introduced into our language during his evidence, viz., "to moonlight." Properly purist as to language, the President protested, but ultimately accepted the word, even as "to boycott" has been accepted. The new verbs have one merit, at all events, they save time.

The Letterfrack Fenian and Moonlighter and Land Leaguer was strongly handled by Sir Charles Russell, whose evident object was to show that all Land Leaguers did not necessarily belong to the earlier institution; and on this point, pressed home with great earnestness, the witness undoubtedly contradicted himself over and over again. A little bit of humour came up when Manion said that the widow Walshe—Sir Charles wisely said Welch—was "no relation to the evicted tenant." This was strictly true, for the widow was the evicted tenant, and it can hardly be argued that even an Irish widow can be any relation to herself. The serious evidence elicited was that the witness had been confined for some weeks when his mind got excited in the Lunatic Asylum of Ballinasloe, and this somewhat told against his ferocious evidence, given in open court, that "I went to murder Lyden that night if I could." Mr. Lockwood made no point of his questions concerning the shooting at a Protestant clergyman, and here it may be said once for all in recording this matter that, just as English counsel experience a natural difficulty in understanding illiterate Irish witnesses, so these latter frequently fail to grasp the exact meaning of questions put by gentlemen speaking precise Queen's English, and prolonged misunderstandings occur thereby. The cross-examination mentioned is a case in point, and an example of the incessant difficulties surrounding the proceedings. The day ended with the production of Peter Flaherty—a tri-syllable, not "Flairty"—and he deposed how he was brought out of his bed and made to swear an oath of what the President described as "a curiously compound character," that is to say, "to pay no rent, and to be true and loyal to the Irish Republic." Peter seemed an intelligent man of the florid red-bearded sort, and became highly dramatic as he illustrated the taking of these secret oaths with uplifted hand and vivid gesture. He, too, swore, on cross-examination by Mr. Reid, Q.C., that when he went out "moonlighting" on a certain occasion "We were quite prepared to shoot him." Of course this brought out the question, "In what form did repentance come to you?" and the answer was given emphatically, "They accused me of doing things I didn't do, and so I quarrelled with them." Then came yet another of the misunderstandings already alluded to. Emphatically the witness said he was not "ashamed of what he had done." Counsel took the answer as having reference to his moonlighting proclivities, and what the witness meant was that he was not ashamed of having become "a Crown witness." This point, obvious to many present, was ultimately cleared up by the Court, which had unanimously taken the witness's view of his answer. It is positively refreshing to be able to disentangle from the complex intricacies of yesterday's business one really lovely bit of Peter's evidence. He came over from Ireland last week "in a train," and it was important to know who came with him. He admitted that Manion, the preceding witness of the "informer" class, was with him. Manion had sworn that there were many people with him in the train, but when asked for names simply said, "I didn't know them"—of course referring to the ordinary passengers by the Irish mail. The intelligent Peter, however, attempted no such fence or stupidity, and when asked who else was in his company on his first visit to England, said "There was another woman along with me," at which the whole Court, all day in a state of tension and perplexity and confusion, burst out into an honest roar of laughter.

The Commissioners took their seats on the bench at half-past ten.

The counsel appearing in the case were: For the Times—The Attorney-General (Sir R. Webster, Q.C.), Sir H. James, Q.C., Mr. Murphy, Q.C., and Mr. W. Graham, of the English Bar; and Mr. John Atkinson, Q.C., and Mr. Ronan, of the Irish Bar. For Mr. Parnell—Sir Charles Russell, Q.C., and Mr. Asquith; and for other members of the Irish party—Mr. R. T. Reid, Q.C., Mr. Lockwood, Q.C., Mr. Lionel Hart, Mr. Arthur Russell, and Mr. A. O'Connor, of the English Bar; and Mr. T. Harrington, of the Irish Bar.

Mr. Bucknill, Q.C., also appeared, to make an application on behalf of the Marquis of Clanricarde.

The President reverted to a discussion which took place on a previous day as to the admissibility of certain evidence. A question was addressed, both to employers and herds, as to what reports they had made with reference to certain properties. He was satisfied that there had been some misunderstanding between the counsel and the Court. The arguments of the counsel were directed to show—that hearsay evidence was not proof of facts which were alleged. Never was it the intention of the Court to lay down anything contrary to that. The question upon which the Court expressed an opinion was that the fact that a particular report had been made by a person as part of his duty was admissible as evidence; not that the contents of the report should be taken as evidence. Another matter that was raised was as to certain claims for compensation made by the employers. If it appeared that the claims were made in writing, the writings must be produced to show the grounds of the claim. If they were produced Sir Charles Russell's objection would stand that the claims themselves were not admissible as evidence. The Court was of opinion that they were admissible. But there was, of course, a broad distinction between a thing being admitted in evidence and its proving the facts alleged.

Mr. Justice Smith: I agree entirely with what has been said by my brother.

Sir C. Russell: Will your lordship state your decision as to the documents?

The President: With regard to documents we have examined most of those put in, and are of opinion that some of them ought to be disclosed. I refer particularly to some which are alleged to have come into the possession of Mr. Soames, purporting to have been written by certain persons, among whom are those against whom the charges and allegations are directed. They appear to be admitted to be spurious, and were rejected by Mr. Soames because he thought so. From his point of view I think he was justified in not including them; but we have a larger discretion to exercise, and are of opinion that those documents ought to be disclosed on this ground: It is alleged by those charged that certain documents are forgeries, and we think they are entitled to have the assistance which it is conceivable they might derive from their examination, because it might be that the handwriting of the documents produced to Mr. Soames, and rejected by him, might be shown to be in the same handwriting as documents said to be in the handwriting of Mr. Parnell. I use that only as an illustration. We have also found some documents in the handwriting of Mr. Davitt, which we are of opinion ought in fairness to him to be disclosed. It is unnecessary to point out the bearing of those documents, because I may observe generally that the fact that they and other documents have been disclosed to the other side does not make them evidence, but if it be sought hereafter to use them in evidence their admissibility will depend on other considerations than those to which I have adverted. In regard to the last documents we have found in them nothing inconsistent with the statement made on oath regarding them. They relate exclusively to the case of "O'Donnell v. Walter," and we are of opinion that they are not documents which the persons charged are entitled to inspect. As to some documents, their disclosure would show who are the witnesses about to be called, and we do not think the parties are entitled to know that. We must be careful in our search for the truth not to obstruct its sources, and there is some reason for saying this, as will be illustrated by the fact that I myself, several days ago, received a threatening letter.

Sir C. Russell: I have received several.

The President: Yes. I dare say all of us engaged in this case in various ways are subject to such threats. The fact that any one should threaten a member of this Court makes it not an improbable thing that another means of intimidation might be brought to bear upon the witnesses if there was premature disclosure. On these grounds, therefore, we do not think that any other than those documents which are mentioned should be submitted for inspection.

Sir C. Russell: We have no opportunity of knowing what those documents are. I presume that it would be convenient that the secretary of the Commission should, under your lordships' direction, make some kind of schedule of the class of documents we are entitled to see.

The President: Yes.

Sir C. Russell: And at all events some description of the kind of documents we are not entitled to see.

The President: I am not able at once to decide that point, but whatever can be done shall be done.

The Attorney-General: With regard to the documents that are to be seen there is, of course, no difficulty. These can easily be scheduled. With regard to the others your lordship's judgment is that they are fairly within the protection claimed on oath by Mr. Soames. That being so, my learned friends would not be entitled to anything which would enable them to get part of the information.

Sir C. Russell: Your lordship said that upon discovery a party is not entitled to know the names of the witnesses who will be called against him. I agree. But I submit that he is not to be precluded from his right of discovery of particular documents, merely because of the fact that that discovery might put him in possession of information as to the persons who were to be called against him. We are entitled to such a description as your lordship thinks proper of the documents that we are not to see.

The President: I have given reasons why we do not consider that you are entitled to inspection. If we can give any description as you suggest, we shall exercise our judgment in the matter.

Mr. Bucknill: I have to make an application on behalf of Lord Clanricarde. I am told that an order, or something amounting to an order, has been made by your lordships' Court.

The President: No order has been made.

Mr. Bucknill: The Marquis of Clanricarde has generally gathered from the report of the proceedings as given in the daily papers, that an order was made by your lordship, or something amounting to an order, there being no objection on either side.

The President: No order has been made. I suppose your desire is to be heard against such an order being made.

Mr. Bucknill: As your lordship pleases. But, until such order is made, I will not trouble your lordship with any observations, except to say how the matter stands. Mrs. Blake, widow of the Marquis of Clanricarde's late agent, was asked by Sir C. Russell whether she had in her possession certain letters showing that her husband had been urging upon his principal to grant a reduction, and her answer was to the effect that she had.

The President: I do not see how any one who thinks his interests would be affected is entitled on that ground to come before us with an application.

Mr. Bucknill: Lord Clanricarde, on my advice, does not propose to object to the jurisdiction of this Court; he admits the power of your lordships to direct that any correspondence relative to the matters before you should be produced, even though they might be letters written by Lord Clanricarde to his late agent. Although this correspondence was of a strictly private and confidential nature, and a Court of competent jurisdiction in Ireland has, for good reasons in that case, directed that the correspondence should not be published, yet, if it could be shown that it would throw light upon matters before this Commission, of course that correspondence should be forthcoming, and Lord Clanricarde would not object. But only such of the correspondence as is relevant should be produced. There is a mass of correspondence which has passed during the agency of the late Mr. Blake to Lord Clanricarde of an entirely private and confidential nature, and it could in no way throw light on the matters your lordships are asked to decide. I, therefore, ask that your lordships would look at the correspondence, which is now in Ireland, and say what you think should be produced and what should not—i.e., what is relevant and what is not.

Sir C. Russell: The suggestion of my learned friend is, on several grounds, a highly-inconvenient course. Your lordships would be in possession of a number of documents which would make an impression upon the minds of those who read them—an impression that might or might not be injurious to the view taken on one side or the other. Your lordships will not be in a position to judge of the relevancy of the whole or any part until you have heard the case as represented by those who appear on either side.

Mr. Bucknill: I hardly think my learned friend's contention is serious. This Court will not direct, by a wholesale order, that all the correspondence which has passed between Lord Clanricarde and his late agent should be handed forth to litigants in a matter of this description, to be dealt with by them as they may think fit.

The President: We will deal with the matter when it comes before us.

Mr. Davitt asked that he might be allowed to inspect the documents said to be written by him at once.

The President: As soon as possible.

PATRICK KENNEDY was then called. He was examined by Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. Atkinson: Where do you live?

Witness: I object to state that.

Do you live in London, or in the country?—In the country.

Did you take a farm from which a woman named Catherine Dempsey had been evicted?—I did, in April, 1879.

Where was it?—At Clonakyleboy, county Galway.

Is there a village called Mullagh near the farm?—There is.

When you took the farm was there a branch of the Land League there?—There was not.

Do you know a wheelwright named Martin O'Halloran, a reporter named Cunningham, and a railway clerk named Farrell?—I do.

Did these three men come to you and have an interview with you in October, 1880?—They did.

Have you since ascertained that they were members of the Land League?

Sir C. Russell: How has he ascertained?

Mr. Atkinson: Have you attended any meetings of the Land League?

Witness: Only one; in November, 1880.

Were these men present?—Cunningham and O'Halloran were.

Was there a meeting subsequently held near your farm and were speeches delivered?—Yes. There was a hope expressed that the grass might wither beneath my feet.

Were there many people at the meeting?—There were about 600 or 700. O'Halloran, the man with whom I had the interview in October, said they would evict the land-grabber, and reinstate the widow and her five orphans. He made a speech to that effect. Cunningham told me in O'Halloran's presence that if I did not give up the farm I would meet with so-and-so.

Did he say what he meant by "so-and-so"?—Those were the words he used. I said "Very good," and he left me. This was before the meeting held on my farm. After the meeting two men came to me and asked me if I would give up the farm. They told me that if I gave up the land it would be no loss to me, and no man in the country would be more thought of. In the following spring I sent a communication to the central office of the League in Dublin, and I received a letter in reply. In the interval—in the year 1881—a branch of the League had been established at Mullagh. The president was Mat O'Brien's son, and the parish priest was also an office-bearer. I went to Mat O'Brien about the letter, and he talked about paying my losses if I would give up the land. He said Mat Harris was the only man who could arrange about it. I did not go to him.

Did you continue to till the land?—I did; and a short time after, in April, I had to be placed under police protection.

Do you know what being boycotted is?—I do.

From April, 1881, were you boycotted?—I was, slightly. After that the League was suppressed in Mullagh, and the annoyance ceased. A branch of the National League was subsequently established, and the annoyance recommenced, and the demeanour of the people towards me was again changed.

In November, 1886, did you get any notice?—Yes. I gave the printed notice to Sergeant Hennessy. A meeting was held on the farm on Nov. 21. On the following day I missed most of my stock. When I went to look for the cattle no one would speak to me to tell me where they were. I found some of them a mile and a half away. I was living with my brother at the time. He was boycotted, and could not get provisions. A few days after my cattle was missing a man came to me.

Was he a member of the League?—I believe so.

What was his name?—I object to state that.

Why?—Because there might be ill-feeling towards me.

What did he say?—He talked of how they spoke at the meeting. After receiving the message I went to Father Bodkin at Mullagh. I told him I would remove the stock if I could find other grass.

What did Father Bodkin say to that?—Nothing at all. I endeavoured to get grass so that I might transfer the stock, but I could not get it at that time because I had not the consent of the members of the League.

Do you remember passing the house of the League at Tynagh?—I lived near Tynagh. Mr. Derwin was the secretary of the Tynagh branch. Mrs. Derwin came out and spoke to me, and I went back with her to the house. There was a meeting being held there. There was one stranger present.

Who was he?—David Sheehy.

Did you ascertain that Mr. Sheehy was a member of Parliament?—I was told so. My brother was with me. He explained his cause—how he took the land, and they did not want to hear it. David Sheehy said that the land must be given up. I said we would if we could get leave to get grass elsewhere. We were to get leave from the League. A man named Ford came to my house that night. I think he was a member of the Tynagh branch of the League. In consequence of what he said, I attended the Mullagh branch of the League when the committee was sitting, and they gave me handwriting for liberty to get grass and remove my stock.

What were you to do?—I was to clear the farm and give it up on Jan. 8, 1887.

Do you remember Pat Dillon saying anything to you?—Yes.

What?—He said he did not like me. (Laughter.)

Did you ask him the reason?—Yes. He said I was a land-grabber.

Did he say anything else?—He said it would do a great deal of good. I asked him, "Is it for the benefit of the Widow Dempsey you are doing it?" and he said, "No; it is to benefit ourselves."

After getting authority, did you take grass?—I did, and I put grass on it. I took the grass from Mrs. Kelly, a farmer and shopkeeper.

Did anything happen to Mrs. Kelly?—She was boycotted by her customers.

Did you give her the authority you got from the League?—Yes.

Why?—To avoid the boycotting. I continued in possession of my farm up to March or April, 1887. I got a letter about that time from Pat Dillon.

Was this the letter: "Mullagh Branch—I am instructed by the committee to communicate with you regarding the Widow Dempsey's farm. We are informed you are still in possession of the farm, and if you do not send us some satisfactory account on or before next Monday we shall be brought to the disagreeable necessity of declaring you still a land-grabber.—By order of the committee, PATRICK DILLON, Assistant Secretary." Did you receive that letter?—Yes; and after that I received the following letter: "Mullagh Branch, April 4, 1887.—Sir—I am directed by the committee of the above to communicate again with you regarding the Widow Dempsey's farm. Give some satisfactory answer whether you have given up possession or not.—Waiting your reply by return of post, I am, your obedient servant, PATRICK DILLON."

In June of that year did you see stock on the land?—Yes.

Was it yours?—No; I believe it was the Widow Dempsey's. In July hay was cut on the land, but not by me. I was told it was the Dempseys who cut it. In September or October that hay was removed from my land. I attended Wicklow Assizes in reference to the prosecution of those charged with cutting the hay. That was in 1888. I gave evidence on the trial, and after that I was still boycotted. I am now under police protection. In 1879 I was on good terms with my neighbours, and I am not aware why they should afterwards have been on bad terms with me, except for my taking the land.

Cross-examined by Sir C. Russell.—Where do you live?—With my brother.

Where?—I object to the question.

Have you been told to object?—No; too many know where I live.

Then if many know it, why do you object?—I know there will be ill feeling against me at home when I go back, and I don't wish the people of London to know.

You say that you are and have been under police protection?—Yes.

And that the people know where you live?—Certainly.

Where did you live at the time you took Widow Dempsey's farm?—I will not tell you.

Where did you live in 1879 when you took the farm? Answer, sir.—I lived in the county of Galway.

Where?—In Ireland. (Laughter).

Had you land there?—No.

Were you farming land with your brother?—No, I was with my brother.

How were you earning your bread?—I do not understand what you mean.

How did you get your living?—I got it through my father.

Do you mean a share of his land?—No.

Were you living on his money?—I was living with my brother.

Were you living on the money you got from your father?—No; I was in the house with my brother. I was supporting the house.

The President (to witness): Do you say you were supporting the house?

Witness: No; I was living with my brother.

Sir C. Russell: If you were not living on the money you got from your father, what, then, were you living on?—(Witness hesitated.)

Sir C. Russell: Come, sir, answer.

Witness: How can I answer? Is it the wind I was living on? (Laughter.)

The President (to witness): You surely know how you were living?

Witness: I was living with my brother, and I was working on the land.

Sir C. Russell: And he gave you your living for that? Were you married?—No.

How long were you living with your brother?—I could not exactly tell you.

About how long?

Witness hesitated.

Don't keep us here all day?—I don't know how long or short. (Laughter.)

When was the widow Dempsey evicted?—In April, 1879.

When did you take the land?—About April 18 or 19. I took it for only six months. There were no arrears. If she then redeemed the farm I was to have no more to do with it. That was the understanding.

When was the first Land League branch established at Mullagh?—There was none until November, 1880.

Was there one in 1881?—Yes; in March, 1881.

Was there one in Tynagh?—Not up to November, 1880.

In the spring of 1881 you wrote to Dublin, and got an answer?—Yes.

Did you show your answer to the police?—I cannot say whether I did or not.

I caution you. Will you swear you did not?—I cannot say.

Have you not, since 1881, been in constant communication with the police, informing them as to each of the meetings you attended, and what took place at them?

Witness hesitated.

On your oath?—I did not tell them half of what passed. (Laughter.)

Whether you told them half or not, have you not since 1881 been in communication with the police, telling them what you were doing and the meetings you were going to?—I went to no meetings since 1881. The Star Chamber Court brought me up.

Where was that held?—In Killimore.

What was that?—I could not exactly say.

The President: I suppose that "Star Chamber" is a nickname?

Sir C. Russell: It is the witness's name for the Court held under the Act of 1887. It is a secret inquiry.

You have said, I think, that you were subject to annoyance?—I could tell you of a whole heap.

Tell me some?—The price of cattle was raised at the fairs when I wanted to buy, and I was shouted and groaned at.

There was a meeting on your farm, I believe?—Two. The first in November, 1880, and the second in November, 1886.

In 1886 did you tell a Mrs. Dillon that you would give up the land in January, 1887, if you could get leave to have grass somewhere else?—I did.

Did you mean it?—I did.

Did you tell Constable Hennessy what you had said?—He was in the house when I got home, and I told him.

And you intended to give up the farm?—Yes; in order to avoid trouble.

And to get on friendly terms with your neighbours?—I suppose so.

Did the constable tell you not to give up the farm?—He did not.

There was a prosecution against a number of people?—Yes, and several were sent to gaol.

How often has Mrs. Dempsey been sent to gaol?—I think only once.

What was that for?—It was about the meeting in 1880.

By Mr. Lockwood: Tell me the names of the police you have spoken to since 1881.—(The witness was silent.)

Come, tell me?—(No answer.)

Are you afraid?—No, I am not afraid; nor am I afraid to give my own name either.

Why don't you answer me?—(Still no answer.)

The President: We cannot wait all day for your answer. The question is a very simple one.

Witness: Sergeant Hennessy was one of them.

Mr. Lockwood: After all that time to consider he gives a name which has been mentioned twenty times already. (To witness): Who else? come, you know them very well?

Witness: Sergeant O'Brien was another.

What did you get in 1881 for your communications to the police?—Nothing.

From 1881 to the present time then?—I am more at a loss than a gain by it.

Just so; but we want to know what were your gains?—Did not I tell you I got nothing by it?

Up till to-day?—Aye.

Who is keeping you now?—I suppose the Times is. (A laugh.)

By Mr. Biggar: It is not a usual thing for sheep to stray over other people's land, when there is no dispute.

Don't you know that land grabbing was unpopular at all times?—I don't remember.

Was not there a good deal of land grabbing in the county of Galway before 1879?—I never heard the name till 1880.

Was land grabbing a popular practice, so far as your memory serves?—I never heard the name of it.

What is your opinion?—My opinion is that a man should not let land lie idle. (Laughter.)

That is not my question. Was the taking of land from which others had been evicted popular among your neighbours?—Who is my neighbour? (Laughter.)

The people round about you. What is your opinion?—My opinion is that land should be taken.

Mr. Biggar: That is not my question.

The President: You are asking his opinion, and he is giving it.

Mr. Lockwood asked leave to put a further question as to whether, since the witness's evidence in the "Star Chamber" Court, he had made a statement to anyone of what he was prepared to say before the Commissioners.

The Court having given permission to put the question, it was repeated to the witness, who did not answer it.

The President: Has your evidence been taken by somebody?

The Witness: It has.

With the view of coming here and giving evidence?—Yes.

Mr. Lockwood: When?

The Witness did not answer.

Mr. Lockwood: Where? (No answer.)

The President: Why will you not answer? You have told us that you made a statement. Surely you must remember when you made it.

Witness: I made it before Mr. Joyce.

Mr. Lockwood: Can you tell me of any other statement you made?—I made a statement to Mr. Shannon.

Re-examined by the Attorney-General: When I went to take the land I said I would not have anything to do with it if the widow Dempsey was able to hold it, and I was then told that there were many others ready to take it.

Was any one interfering with you except the Land League?—No. When I said I would give up the farm I had not given notice to the owner, and when I went to try and give it up he said that I should have to give six months' notice. I was a yearly tenant.

Sergeant HENNESSY, of the Irish Constabulary, stated that the last witness was protected by police patrol in 1880, and in 1881 was under special protection.

What caused him to be placed under special protection in 1881?—His life was considered to be in danger.

In your opinion was it necessary or not?—I considered it necessary.

Was there any Land League in Tynagh at that time?—I believe there was. There were committee meetings held in 1881.

How long did the special protection continue?—From April, 1881, to January, 1882. The Land League was suppressed in 1882. The National League was established in August, 1885. On Dec. 5, 1886, I went to Kennedy's house. He showed me a paper, of which I produce a copy. It is dated "Dec. 5, 1886, Mullagh Branch," and says, "Mr. Patrick Kennedy, the man in possession of widow Dempsey's farm, has appealed to the committee of the League asking time until Jan. 8, 1887, in order to dispose of his cattle, and we have come to the conclusion that anybody will be justified in exchanging dealings with him."

Have you any doubt that this referred to a meeting of the National League?—I have no doubt. Kennedy was at that time trying to get grass for his cattle.

By Sir C. Russell: I have no doubt that the cause of ill-feeling against Kennedy was his taking Dempsey's farm. The taking of evicted farms was very general. It was not popular.

Re-examined by the Attorney-General: Before 1879 I never knew it to be regarded as an offence to take an evicted farm or to pay rent, nor have I known land-grabbers to be denounced before the meetings of the league were held.

Sergeant RYAN, who had charge of a district near Mullagh, said that a branch of the National League was started there in March, 1884. A league meeting was held on Kennedy's farm. Mr. Sheehy, M.P., was present. Kennedy was to take away his stock in January, 1887. In the following July he saw Michael Dempsey mowing on the farm, and Mrs. Dempsey and her children were engaged in saving hay. In September some loads of hay were taken from the farm. Several persons were arrested and prosecuted for conspiracy.

By Sir C. Russell: Witness attended the committee meetings of the league. The majority of his neighbours were members of it. The meetings were perfectly open. He was permitted to be present, and was treated very civilly.

The Commissioners here adjourned for luncheon.

On the Court resuming,

JAMES MANNION, farmer, of Letterfrack, examined by Mr. Atkinson, said: A Land League branch was established at Letterfrack in 1880, and I was a member of it. The meetings were frequently held at the house of Mrs. Walsh, whose son was hanged for the murder of Lyden. Drink was distributed at the meetings, and, I believe, was paid for by the League. Most of the members of the League were members of the Fenian Society. I was sworn in as a member of the Fenian Society by Pat Ruane. The Fenian members had a sign by which they knew each other. At a meeting of the League held at Mrs. Walsh's house it was resolved to visit the house of Anthony Coyne at night, obtain processes from him, and give him a good beating. I formed one of the party. Two men had revolvers, and one a rifle. Coyne was pulled out of bed and warned not to support the law against Lyden. He said he had not a copy of the processes demanded of him. He received a good kicking, and three shots were fired through the roof of the house. Nobody was apprehended for this. I was a tenant of Mr. Graham, and at a subsequent Land League meeting it was reported that his tenants were paying their rent. I said that Mr. Graham had made a good reduction, but I was told that Mr. Graham and all belonging to him ought to be shot. After that notices were sent to the tenants, stating that if they paid their rents they would be shot.

Do you remember after that event a conversation with Ruane about Mr. Joseph M'Donald?—Yes. He told me he had heard that Mr. M'Donald was going to dine with Mr. Graham that night, and he wanted me to find out what time. He said he was to be shot, and that the man who would shoot him would be well paid for the work. At Ruane's request I went down to ascertain whether Mr. M'Donald, who was Mr. Graham's agent, would dine with Mr. Graham. I asked the butler, whom I knew very well, whether Mr. M'Donald was going to dine that night, and he said "Yes." Then I went back and told Pat Ruane that Mr. M'Donald would not be there, but was to dine with another gentleman a mile away. I did not wish to have anything to do with it. By the rules of the society I was compelled to do what I was ordered, or I should have been shot the next night. Afterwards some of Mr. M'Donald's sheep were taken away to Mrs. Walsh's. Her two sons were then both alive.

Did you know the Rev. Canon Fleming?—Yes. I worked at a quarry near his house. Flaherty, one of the members of the League, was located near me. Seeing young Mr. Fleming passing, Flaherty said, speaking in the Irish language, he would not like to be in his (Fleming's) father's boots. Afterwards Canon Fleming was fired at.

Do you remember the time the Lydens were murdered?—I do. On the day before a meeting was held in Mrs. Walsh's house. Her son Pat, who was afterwards hanged for the murder, was present. Her son Michael was also there, and others. Ruane was not there, but his brother was. There was a discussion about whether the Lydens should be shot on account of the herding of the farm from which the Walshes had been evicted. Six of us afterwards went to Lyden's house. Several had firearms, but there was a light in the house, and the dogs barked, and we did not get a chance of shooting him. Lyden was shot afterwards. Some men were subsequently tried for conspiracy to murder, including Kenealy, Joyce, Farley, and Flaherty. They pleaded guilty. Ruane, in the meantime, went away to America.

Cross-examined by Sir C. Russell: I am not a Ribbonman. I have never heard of the Ribbon Society. I never heard of Fenianism until it was started in that country of ours. I have lived all my life at Letterfrack. I have not been in America.

Were you charged yourself with having had anything to do with the murder of Lyden?—I was, and was in gaol about three or four months.

How did you come to be let out?—I guess they could not find much against me.

Did your mind give way at all when you were in prison?—Yes, I got a little excited.

You have got back your recollection very clear?—Oh, yes; I guess so now.

How long was your mind affected?—About five or six weeks. I was in an asylum at Ballinasloe. I was removed from the gaol there. I was a prisoner at the time.

On this particular night, when you went with five other men to Lyden's house, you went to murder him if you got the chance?—Yes.

When you went to Coyne's you knew you were going to commit an outrage on that man?—Yes.

On your oath, do you say you never heard of Fenianism before 1880?—I swear it.

Was it not the fact that secret societies extensively existed in that part of Galway, and to your knowledge?—Not to my recollection.

Have you not heard that they existed before your childhood in that part of the country?—Yes, I have heard something about it.

Were the meetings at widow Walsh's, that you have spoken of, Fenian meetings?—Well, I do not see how I can call them Fenian meetings, because I called them all Land League meetings.

Was there any one there that was not a Fenian?—No.

Do you allege that the people who were members of the Land League were all Fenians?—Well, I do not know. I do not know much about them.

Do you say that the parish priest was a Fenian?—I do not.

Was he a member of the Land League?—Not to my recollection.

Then, if we have been told he was president of the Land League, you did not know he was?—I do not.

Was Father O'Connor, said to be the secretary of the Land League, a Fenian?—I do not know about him.

You have told the learned counsel that every one at the meeting held at widow Walsh's in the dead of night was a Fenian. Were they not simply Fenian meetings? I guess there were both parties—both Fenians and Land Leaguers.

You say you knew them by secret signs. Is it true that, knowing them by secret signs, you knew they were Fenians?—That is true.

Were you a Land Leaguer?—I was.

You had a card?—I got one from Ruane, six or seven years ago, at Letterfrack. He gave it me at Mrs. Walsh's, one Sunday.

Whose name was signed on the card?—I do not know. I could not read. Ruane said to me, "Here's a card for your being a Land Leaguer." I don't know whether I have it now or not.

I suppose you could get the card?—Perhaps I could.

I wish you would try. Who asked you to join the Land League?—Pat Ruane and James Varley.

When were you asked?—I guess it was in 1880.

Will you swear there was any Land League at Letterfrack in 1880?—I guess there was.

Never mind guessing; you are on your oath.—I could not exactly swear, but that is my opinion as to the time.

Was Mrs. Walsh, at whose house these meetings took place, any relation of the persons evicted by Graham?—No.

Was not she herself the evicted tenant?—Yes. (Laughter.)

Pat Walsh, her son, was hanged for the murder of Lyden?—He was.

Was he not one of the murder party of which you were a member?—He was.

By Mr. Lockwood: Do you remember anything of the Fenian oath you took?

Witness: No; it was very hard, and I cannot remember it.

Re-examined by Sir H. James: Did you attend meetings at Mrs. Walsh's before you got the card?—I did once. I was sworn a member to the League, or whatever they were. I don't know what they were.

In what capacity did you go?—Well, I don't know. As far as I know I am telling your lordships and the court what occurred.

PETER FLAHERTY, examined by Mr. Murphy, said: I am a farmer living in the County Galway. I joined the Land League in 1880. A party of men came into my house, and I was sworn in my own house. I was brought out of my bed.

What were you sworn to?—To pay no rent, and to be true and loyal to the Irish Republic. There were about thirteen men. I did not know who they were that night, but I know now.

Before the outrage on O'Neill's farm had there been a meeting?—There had. It was held on a town land on Mrs. Blake's property between twelve and one at night. About eighty were present. Most of them, to my knowledge, were Land Leaguers. It was decided to banish the sheep from the farm, and that if after notice O'Neill did not take them away, they should be destroyed.

What had O'Neill done?—Nothing at all; he was a very good man, only they wanted him to give up his land, leaving it with nothing on it, so that the landlord would give it to the tenants. This was Mrs. Blake's land. She was boycotted at the time. The two head men in this affair were Ruane and Mulkern, so far as I could make out. On the night of the outrage I went to O'Neill's farm with about ninety others. I was one of ten men told off to watch the herd's house. If he or any of his family stirred during the time we were destroying the sheep, they were to be destroyed themselves. One of them had a revolver. I heard afterwards that the sheep were drowned. About five or six weeks after that I attended another meeting at Derry Herbert, at which about sixty were present. This was between one and two o'clock at night. Ruane made a speech, and he asked us to repeat an oath after him. I do not remember what the oath was.

Was there not a meeting at the sacristy of the chapel at Tully?—Yes; it was a meeting of evicted tenants on Mrs. Blake's property. Some of them were expecting to get more or less money from the priests. The priest told us it was not right to give Land League money to the landlords. Father O'Connell was the priest. After the priest was gone, Mulkern said that if anybody paid rent he would "settle" with him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Reid: I took part in the moonlighting at O'Neill's.

You went there to watch the herd's house?—Yes.

And to shoot if necessary?—Yes.

Had you anything to do with any other outrage?—Nothing; but I knew that outrages were to go on. I was not asked to go to any other.

You say you joined a society and took an oath to the Republic?—I did.

Do you mean to say you don't know the nature of that society?—I do not.

Had you never heard of the Irish Republican Brotherhood?—No.

And then you took another oath?—I did.

What was that oath; do you remember it?—I don't know what it was, except that I understood that I was sworn to be a moonlighter.

Whenever requested?—Yes; whenever I should be called on I should go.

How long did you remain in that frame of mind?—About a year and a half.

And how did you come to repent, or did you repent?—No, sir; they accused me of a thing I was not guilty of, and it was then I turned against them.

And there was no repentance—you were not ashamed of what you did?—No, sir.

And you would be ready to do it again?—I would.

Why?—Because they treated me badly.

How came you to quarrel with the moonlighters?—I was shot at, and when I came off safe I gave information to the police.

With whom did you travel over from Ireland?—With the last witness, Manion, and there was another woman along with me. (Laughter.)

By Mr. Biggar: Mrs. Blake gave no reduction in rent, but her brother or brother-in-law was distributing relief to her tenants.

Re-examined by Sir H. James: I meant just now that I was not ashamed to be a Crown witness because they ill-treated me.

By Mr. Reid: As I understand, you were prepared to go on moonlighting whenever required up to 1882?—I was.

And prepared to commit murders in these moonlighting frays if necessary?—Yes; I should take part in them.

In 1882 you quarrelled with your confederates and became a Crown witness?—I did.

Was it from revenge or anger you left the confederacy?—If they had not made an attempt to shoot me I should not have left.

And you would have continued perfectly prepared to go moonlighting and commit murder if necessary?—I should.

Your ideas upon murder have not altered?—Well, I don't want to murder any one; God forbid I should.

EDWARD FLANAGAN, examined by Mr. Atkinson, deposed to the active part taken in American Land League work by Mr. Meaney, formerly of Ennis, West Clare.

Mr. Reid: I would ask whether this is relevant. Here is a gentleman who is proved to have made a speech or two speeches on the same platform with one of sixty-five members, and afterwards he is found, in the same year, or indeed before, I think in 1879, collecting money in America. I submit that that does not make it evidence in any way.

The President: The allegation is that these persons were all members of a combination; doing various acts in various places; and, amongst the rest, therefore, if Mr. Meaney was a member of the Land League in Ireland, and he became president of a Land League in America, surely what he addresses to a meeting summoned by that body would be evidence of an overt act in the combination alleged to have existed.

The witness, in further examination, said that when he returned from America in 1885 he found the conduct of the people changed. There was faction against faction, and disunion among the people. Honest men could not live there at all. Meaney had collected money and purchased two revolvers, to be taken to Clare. Witness kept one, and gave the other to the steward of the boat in which he came over. (Laughter.) Witness afterwards got three months for having firearms in his possession. (Laughter.)

The Commissioners rose at four o'clock.

WILL OF THE LATE TOM KING.—Probate of the will, dated Aug. 13 last, of the late Mr. Thomas King, of Clarence House, Clapham, who died on Oct. 4, aged 53 years, has been granted to the executrixes, his wife, Mrs. Jane E. King, and his daughter, Mrs. Emily Standridge, the wife of Mr. Thomas Henry Standridge, of Bury, Lancs. The testator, better known as Tom King, was born in Stepney. After making one voyage as a sailor, he obtained work at the Victoria Docks, and rose to be foreman of the shipping works, adopting pugilism also as a profession. He was beaten by Mace in January, 1862, but in November of the same year the combatants again met, and the tables were then turned, and King became the champion of England. After a fight, which excited much interest at the time, with John Heenan, the Benicia Boy, in March, 1863, Tom King retired from the prize ring and became a bookmaker. The value of his personal estate is declared at £54,472 8s. He leaves to Mrs. King £500, his furniture and household effects, plate, pictures, jewellery, and books, and the leasehold interest in Clarence House, and to his coachman, another servant, and his daughter's nurse £20 each. He desires that his freehold property at Hastings, excepting the house Malcolmpeth, may not be sold, and that his money in bank shares and the shares of Ind, Coope, and Co., and New South Wales and Egyptian stocks may remain in its present state of investment. Any investment made by the executrixes is to be in the public stocks or funds or Government securities of the United Kingdom, or in India Three and a Half per Cent. stock, but not in any other mode of investment. He leaves to his wife for life the income of one-third of his residuary estate, and subject thereto leaves the residue of his property, real and personal, in trust to pay the income thereof for her life to his daughter Mrs. Standridge, with power of appointment to her in favour of her children.

The Royalist Section of the French Senate have determined to abandon the adventurous policy of General Boulanger. But both the Right and Left are unanimous in their vote that Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer may be relied upon to preserve and renew the natural colour and early beauties of the hair. Sold everywhere.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

DORSET-STREET MURDER.

Although statements continue to be made to the police by persons who believe they have information of importance to communicate, no fresh clue has been discovered. A large clerical staff is occupied daily at Leman-street in dealing with the mass of papers which accumulates in connection with the investigation of the case. The detectives were hoping that when the murderer resumed his visits to Whitechapel he would leave behind him traces which would enable them to identify him, but the cunning of the assassin has been, as usual, great. Meanwhile, another letter, purporting to have been written by "Jack the Ripper," was received yesterday morning at Leman-street. It refers to the latest murder, and threatens more. Dorset-street continues to be thronged with sightseers, and it is becoming unsafe for a respectably-dressed man to loiter about, as he immediately excites observation, and some officious person, becoming suspicious, calls the attention of the constable on the beat to him. In one case yesterday afternoon a gentleman, who gave an address in Cheapside, was taken to Commercial-street Police-station, and detained for an hour and a half, pending inquiries. With regard to the statement of Mrs. Cox that she saw a man who carried a pot of beer enter, with the deceased, her room in Miller's-court on the morning of the murder, no can has been found, and inquiry has failed to discover any publican who served Kelly or her companion with beer on the night of Thursday. A second inquest would have been held on the body had it been removed into the Whitechapel district for burial. Mr. Wynne Baxter states that in that case it could not have been avoided, but the double inquiry has been averted by the action of Mr. H. Wilton, parish clerk and keeper of the Shoreditch mortuary. He has undertaken to inter the body at his own expense, assisted by contributions which may be received, and yesterday he obtained from the coroner's officer, Mr. Hammond, an order to prepare the coffin. Much surprise is expressed that the inquest should have been closed before an opportunity was given to the relatives of the deceased to identify the body. As they are believed to reside in Ireland there was some delay to be expected in finding them. Dr. Macdonald stated that the duty of the jury was to ascertain the cause of death, but the common law, since Edward I., has declared that, in the language of the declaratory statute, "all the injuries of the body, also all wounds, ought to be viewed; and the length, breadth, and deepness, with what weapon, and in what part of the body the wound or hurt is; and how many be culpable, and how many wounds there be, and who gave the wounds—all which things must be enrolled in the roll of the coroner's." No question was put as to any of these points; the doctor was not asked as to the nature of the weapon which had been used to cause the injuries. It has been held that a coroner is bound to accept all evidence tendered, and to take down in writing the material parts. Dr. Macdonald interrogated the witnesses, but it was Mr. Hodgkinson who committed their testimony to writing. It is in the power of the Attorney-General to apply to the High Court of Justice to hold a new inquest, if he is satisfied that there has been rejection of evidence, irregularity of proceedings, or insufficiency of inquiry. This course is improbable, as it is stated that Mr. Phillips, the divisional surgeon of police, with whom the coroner consulted in private, has had a commission from the Home Office for some time, and he does not consider himself a "free agent"; but it is pointed out that by hurriedly closing the inquest the opportunity has been lost of putting on record statements made on oath, and when the memory of witnesses is fresh. It is not improbable that a long interval may elapse before a prisoner is charged at the police-court.

The Central News says: The police have made a thorough search of casual wards and other places of a similar character. In the Holborn casual ward their attention was attracted to the very suspicious behaviour of one of the temporary inmates. Constables were at once sent to the place, and they arrested a rough-looking fellow, who gave the name of Thomas Murphy. He was taken to the police-station at Frederick-street, King's-cross-road, where on being searched he was found to have in his possession a somewhat formidable-looking knife with a blade about 10in long. He was, therefore, detained in custody on suspicion, and the police proceeded to make inquiries into the truth of his statements. The task was rendered difficult by the confused and contradictory accounts which Murphy gave of himself, and the man was still in custody last evening. Murphy did not worry himself in the least about his detention, for he was supplied with refreshments in the course of the day, and was allowed to sit near a fire—luxuries to which he had evidently not been used for some time past. He amused himself by reading over and over again a piece of newspaper which he held in his hand, but his manner was restless and irritable at times. Murphy is about 5ft 6in in height, and has the general appearance of a sailor. His hair is light, and complexion fair. He is dressed in a blue jersey, his coat and trousers being of a minute check pattern. He wears a "cheesecutter" cap and a thick pair of boots.

SWEATING SYSTEM.

Yesterday the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the sweating system resumed their sittings. Their lordships met at eleven o'clock in Room A at the House of Lords, the Earl of Dunraven presiding, the other members of the committee present being the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Limerick, Lord Thring, Lord Monkswell, Lord Clinton, Lord Sandhurst, and Lord Clifford of Chudleigh.

It will be remembered that their Lordships first assembled on March 13, and held numerous sittings until July 30, when they issued an interim report, recommending the continuation of their inquiry and extending its scope to the country generally.

Mr. Nepean, Director of Army Contracts, was now recalled. In answer to the noble chairman he said that the clothing contracts which did not come under his notice were those relating to the Admiralty, the Metropolitan Police, the Board of Customs, and the Board of Trade; but at the request of the Treasury witness had lately inspected the forms of tender for contract for those departments. He was in a position to say that the contracts for the police, the Customs' officials, and the Board of Trade did now contain the factory clause, as he had been in communication with the departments on the subject.

By Lord Thring: One factor operating upon the cost of manufacturing clothing in factories was that none but skilled hands were employed upon such work, capable of turning out a fair quantity. Employés who did not come up to the standard were discharged, and it was these people who were compelled to take work at whatever price they could get.

By Lord Monkswell: When a contractor says he pays good wages we have only his word for it.

Mr. Ramsay, Director of Clothing, was also further examined. Having explained that the system of employing outdoor labour in connection with the Pimlico factory was gradually dying out, by virtue of the minute of Mr. Childers, he stated that a large factory was being created, in order under all circumstances to do away with putting out the work. Could not say whether or not the factory clause was violated; but before a tender was accepted he had the contractor's premises inspected with the view of ascertaining whether he had a factory and the means of carrying out his undertaking. As a matter of fact, it was nobody's business to see that the factory clause was carried out. There had been one complaint as to an evasion of the factory clause, and on inquiry it was found to have occurred in connection with a factory at Bury St. Edmunds. This case of violation was proved by tracing the absolute materials. Witness did not agree that clothing work could be done so cheap in the factory as outside. About thirty "viewers" were employed in connection with the Government contracts, and there were a number of inspectors over the viewers, these higher officials having to determine the rejections of the viewers.

Do you consider sufficient check is exercised over the viewers to prevent the possibility of favouritism?—That is a difficult question to answer. We use every possible precaution. The viewer stands between two fires—the soldier and the contractor. There are few complaints—in only 140 out of 3,500 reports from all parts of the world—and we consider that evidence of satisfaction. In boots the complaints had increased owing to the introduction of machine-made boots. The army did not like them, there being a want of flexibility in the sole which did not suit the feet of the men, rendering them uncomfortable; but the difficulty was being overcome and complaints on this score were decreasing. A great deal of the shirt-making for the army was given to the wives of soldiers at a price which allowed them sixpence each article—a price above the usual amount, in consequence of their being soldiers' wives. The tendency was to do away with outdoor work in connection with the Government factory.

Mr. George Marsh, principal viewer, and Mr. Wingrove, ordinary viewer of articles supplied to the Government under contracts, having been examined,

Mr. E. Salaman, of the firm of Salaman and Co., of Whitechapel and Northampton, boot manufacturers, gave his experiences of the boot trade, and explained the manner in which Government contracts were carried out. The hand-sewn boots were sent to Northampton, because the necessary labour was not available in London. Most of the work on machine-made boots was carried out in their factory; but sweaters were engaged to supply the cheaper kind of boots, chiefly because they could be relied upon to supply a given quantity in a certain time, whereas individual workmen failed to work on Mondays and Tuesdays.

After hearing similar evidence, the Committee adjourned until to-morrow.

It is notified by the Gas Light and Coke Company, Horseferry-road, Westminster, that from Jan. 1 next the price of common gas (16 candles illuminating power) supplied by them will be reduced to 2s. 6d. per 1,000 cubic feet.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

TUESDAY.

The Lord Chancellor took his seat on the woolsack at a quarter-past four o'clock.

Lord Savile (formerly Sir John Savile, Ambassador at Rome) took the oath and his seat on his elevation to the peerage. The noble lord was introduced by Lords Lamington and Wimborne.

The Victoria University Bill was read a third time.

OATHS BILL.

Earl SPENCER moved the second reading of this bill, and said he was glad that during the last year a marked change had taken place in public opinion upon this matter. Formerly it was characterised by bitter controversy, but the present measure had been carried through the House of Commons partly with the assistance of members of her Majesty's Government. Although he could not advocate the abolition of oaths in courts of justice, he favoured a declaration in place of the oath of allegiance, and he thought the present was an appropriate time when, apart from party strife, they might remove some of the present disabilities under which many persons suffered, particularly when they remembered that the whole tendency of legislation during many years had been to diminish the number of oaths. The bill enabled persons to affirm in every case where, on account of their religious belief or their want of religious belief, they desired to do so.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, speaking for himself, and not for the Government, regarded the bill with considerable jealousy. The operation of the oath on the ordinary mind had a very considerable effect. He should deprecate any dissociation of religious belief from the exercise of any judicial function, and if the bill came into the committee stage he should have certain alterations to propose.

Lord ADDINGTON opposed the bill.

The Bishop of CARLISLE, alluding to the fact that he was the only occupant of the Episcopal bench present, said the House might gather from that circumstance that his right reverend brethren did not regard the bill as that concession to unbelief which the noble lord seemed to think. He would probably be criticised severely by the press, and particularly the religious press—(laughter)—by voting for this bill, but he did not think he should be acting falsely to his God and his Saviour by voting for a measure which he regarded as necessary for the settlement of a long and painful controversy. (Hear, hear.)

The Earl of DERBY supported the bill.

The Marquis of SALISBURY said that, in dealing with the amendments to this bill, he proposed to follow the time-honoured policy of seeing them before he expressed any opinion concerning them.

The bill was then read a second time.

The House adjourned at ten minutes to six o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.

NAVAL ARMAMENTS.

Mr. BRODRICK stated, in answer to Mr. Duff, that the firms to whom orders had been given for additional naval guns were Messrs. Vickers and Co., Sir William Armstrong and Co., and Sir Joseph Whitworth and Co. The orders included guns of over nine inches in diameter. The amount required had been included either in the estimates or in the loan, and would be met out of the expenditure for the year. If it should exceed the provision for the year under any particular vote, there would be a supplementary estimate.

METROPOLITAN POLICE.

Mr. MATTHEWS, replying to Lord H. Bruce, said he was informed by the Commissioner that the police in the metropolis were located according to the wants of each particular district, and not according to the population or to the rates. He had no reason to believe that they were overworked or undermanned as to their ordinary duties, and when there were extra duties to be performed they were always cheerfully undertaken.

Mr. JOHNSTON: Who is the commissioner who gave the information?

Mr. MATTHEWS: Sir Charles Warren.

VAN AND WHEEL TAX.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER informed Mr. Kelly that there was absolutely no foundation for the statement published in several newspapers quite recently to the effect that he had decided upon proceeding no further with the proposed taxes upon carts and vans. He considered himself pledged to a position from which he could not withdraw.

SIR CHARLES WARREN.

Mr. MATTHEWS: In order to avoid misunderstanding as to the grounds of Sir Chas. Warren's resignation, which I announced yesterday, I ask leave of the House to make a statement. On Nov. 8 I directed the following letter to be written to Sir Chas. Warren: "Sir—Mr. Secretary Matthews directs me to state that his attention has been called to an article signed by you in this month's number of 'Murray's Magazine,' relating to the management and discipline of the Metropolitan Police Force. He desires me to forward to you the enclosed copy of the Home Office circular, which was duly communicated to the Commissioner of Police in 1879, and to state that the directions in that circular were intended to apply to the Metropolitan Police, and to every officer in the force, from the commissioner downwards. I am accordingly to request that in future the terms of this order may be strictly complied with.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant (Signed) E. Leigh Pemberton." The enclosure from the Home Office was in these terms: "The Secretary of State having had his attention called to the question of allowing private publication by officers attached to the department of books on matters relating to the department, is of opinion that the practice may lead to embarrassment, and should in future be discontinued. He desires, therefore, that it should be considered a rule of the department that no officer should publish any work relating to the department unless the sanction of the Secretary of State has been previously obtained for the purpose." I received on the same day the following reply: "Sir—I have just received a pressing and confidential letter stating that a Home Office circular of May 27, 1879, is intended to apply to the metropolitan police force. I have to point out that, had I been told that such a circular was to be in force, I should not have accepted the post of Commissioner of Police. I have to point out that my duties and those of the Metropolitan Police are governed by statute, and that the Secretary of State for the Home Department has not the power under the statute of issuing orders for the police force. This circular, if put in force, would practically enable everyone anonymously to attack the police force without in any way permitting the commissioner to correct false statements, which I have been in the habit of doing whenever I found it necessary for three years past. I desire to say that I entirely decline to accept these instructions with regard to the Commissioner of Police, and I have again to place my resignation in the hands of her Majesty's Government.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant (Signed) Chas. Warren." I answered this letter on Nov. 10 in the following terms: "Sir—I beg to acknowledge your letter of the 8th inst. In that letter, after contending that the Secretary of State has not the power, under statute, of issuing orders for the Metropolitan Police, you decline to accept his instructions that the commissioner and all officers of the force should comply with the Home Office minute of May 27, 1879, by which officers attached to the Home Department were enjoined not to publish any work relating to the department without the previous sanction of the Secretary of State, and you place your resignation in the hands of her Majesty's Government. In my judgment the claim thus put forward by you, as Commissioner of Police, to disregard the instructions of the Secretary of State is altogether inadmissible, and accordingly I have only to accept your resignation. At the same time I am glad to acknowledge the services which you have rendered to her Majesty's Government during the course of your administration of the police force." The Government accepted the resignation of Sir Chas. Warren on the ground stated in the correspondence I have read, and on no other ground. The failure of the police to discover recent crimes in the metropolis and the differences of opinion between Sir Chas. Warren and Mr. Monro had nothing to do with the action of the Government in parting with an officer so distinguished and so zealous in the discharge of his office as Sir Charles Warren has been. I wish to add, in justice to Mr. Monro and Mr. Anderson, that since Mr. Monro's resignation he has not interfered in any way with the conduct of the business of the Criminal Investigation Department, nor has he been consulted by myself, or by anyone else to my knowledge, on the subject. The advice which I have sought from Mr. Monro has been confined to the general question of the organisation proper for the department in the abstract, without any reference whatever to the daily current business of the department.

Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM: I should like to ask the right hon. gentleman what the word "again" refers to in Sir Charles Warren's letter. (Hear, hear.) Is this not the first time that Sir Charles Warren's resignation has been placed in the hands of her Majesty's Government?

Mr. MATTHEWS: There have been previous differences concerning the tendering of his resignation.

Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM: At what time did the former resignation occur? (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MATTHEWS was understood to decline to answer the question.

Mr. LABOUCHERE: What is the precise position of Mr. Monro, who has been consulted?

Mr. MATTHEWS: Mr. Monro holds no office of any kind, and is in no way connected with the Metropolitan police.

Mr. J. STUART: Will the right hon. gentleman lay the correspondence on the table?

Mr. MATTHEWS: If hon. members wish it.

Mr. BRADLAUGH: The documents having been read to the House by a Minister, is he not bound to lay them on the table? (Hear, hear.)

Mr. CONYBEARE: Can the right hon. gentleman inform the House whether the report in the St. James's Gazette to-night that the office has been offered to the hon. member for Central Sheffield (Mr. Howard Vincent) is correct?

Mr. MATTHEWS: The statements which appear on the subject are all of them, as far as I have seen them, without any foundation whatever.

The subject then dropped.

NEW MEMBER.

Mr. Pritchard Morgan took the oath and his seat for Merthyr Tydvil, in place of Mr. Henry Richard, deceased. The hon. gentleman was introduced by Mr. Arnold Morley and Mr. Osborn Morgan.

SUPPLY.

The House went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, Mr. Courtney in the chair.

Upon the vote of £153,315 for the Supreme Court of Judicature,

Mr. JENNINGS moved its reduction by £500, in order to call attention to the extravagant salaries paid to the holders of sinecures and under-worked officials connected with the administration of the law. Commencing with the permanent secretary to the Lord Chancellor, with a salary of £1,500 a year, the hon. member reviewed the subordinate offices until he came to "the man who gives out the pens and ink, and who receives £300 a year." The Supreme Court included a staff of eighty-five "redundant clerks," each with a salary of £500 a year, not one of whom had crossed the threshold of his office during the last seven years. Others received £600 a year for performing nominally six hours' work per day, and enjoyed six weeks' holiday every summer. When Lord Coleridge, during an inquiry by a committee, inquired whether an attendance book was kept, a witness informed his lordship that such an innovation would be very much resented by the gentlemen in the office. (Laughter.) The extravagant scale upon which these and other officials were remunerated afforded a sight which should fill every Englishman with pride at the riches and prosperity of his native land. (Laughter.) If it were a mere question of vested interests, he confessed that he was disposed to make short work of them. (Hear, hear.) Gross jobs had been perpetrated years ago, and it was idle to say that they could improve with age. He hoped the committee would reduce this vote by the sum of £500, and thus strike a blow at a system which disgraced the country and which should be regarded with shame by the House. (Cheers.)

Mr. BRADLAUGH referred to the Queen's Remembrancer Office, which, he said, cost £2,000 or £3,000 a year roughly, and there was nothing that was done there that might not be done in the office of the ordinary masters of the Court. Was it tolerable, he asked, that an office should be continued in which the work, or certainly a portion of it, was so slight that from the head official to the lowest not one of them understand the rules governing the business?

Mr. LAWSON asked whether those who appeared in the vote as on the active service received the full compensation allowance of former officers, instead of, as was supposed to be the rule in the public service, only a small part.

Mr. HALDANE complained of the inconvenience of the new method of appointing clerks under the chief clerks of the Chancery Division.

Mr. COZENS-HARDY thought the number of official referees might be reduced with advantage, as there really was not work enough for one.

Lord R. CHURCHILL submitted that never since Committee of Supply had sat in modern days had such a state of things been revealed as was now disclosed by the hon. member for Stockport. Yet, although it amounted to a national disgrace, and to an absolute malversation of public money on a large scale, there were only eighty or one hundred members present. When the division was taken 150 or 200 members who were now lying in ambush—(laughter)—and who did not know what was going on, would enter the House and pass the vote in spite of all disclosures. (Opposition cheers.) The extravagant expenditure that had been described constituted nothing short of brigandage upon the taxpayers of the country, and it was high time that it was brought to light in a manner calculated to excite the imagination of the public. It was no use appointing Commissions to inquire into national expenditure so long as governments paid no heed to their reports. Of course the money would have to be paid, but if the reduced vote were passed he hoped the Government would be induced to pledge themselves to remedial reforms in the future. (Hear, hear.)

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL thought the attitude of the noble lord was better calculated to excite the imagination of the country than the judgment. (Ministerial cheers.) His own phrase was, therefore, singularly happy. If he examined the matter more closely, as the hon. member for Stockport had done, he would find that, although there were parts of the system which called for reform, there was nothing deserving to be called "malversation of public money," or "brigandage upon the taxpayer." (Hear, hear.) No one could read the report of the Committee without agreeing at once that there were offices which required to be overhauled and examined, but it was impossible for any Government to make immediate reductions of large amounts. The position of the Secretary to the Lord Chancellor was the result of a bargain made by the Government last in office. The Hon. E. P. Thesiger was not only a clerk in the House of Lords, but also acted as Secretary of Presentations in the office of the Lord Chancellor. In his first capacity he received £600 a year as clerk in the Civil Service, and in his second £400; and for the latter sum he had to conduct all the correspondence relating to the 695 livings in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. The member for Paddington seemed to imagine that £1,000 per annum was too much for this gentleman to receive.

Lord R. CHURCHILL: No; my complaint is that lawyers are paid five or six times as much as laymen for their services. (Hear, hear.)

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL was not aware that Mr. Thesiger was a lawyer—(laughter)—but his duties were certainly of an important character. As to the purse and train-bearer of the Lord Chancellor, he was, perhaps, more ornamental than useful on State occasions. (Laughter.) But he was a confidential clerk to the Lord Chancellor, and took charge of correspondence which did not pass through the hands of the secretaries, and his pay would probably not be considered exorbitant. The remarks of the member for Stockport with respect to the Masters in the Queen's Bench Division were altogether undeserved.

Mr. JENNINGS said his observations were quoted from the reports of two committees and the evidence of Sir Frederick Pollock. (Opposition cheers.)

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL: But he did not refer to the general duties of the Masters. Those gentlemen were men of wide experience, and their salaries of from £1,200 to £1,500 per annum could not be looked upon as extravagant, though their number might possibly be reduced. It had been suggested that the Petty Bag should be watched—(laughter)—but the Government had no intention to restore that office. Severe comments had been passed upon the Senior Registrar of the Probate Court, but it should not be forgotten that by Act of Parliament he had an allowance of £1,800 a year in consequence of the abolition of the monopoly of proctors in 1854. Being an efficient man the appointment which he now held was also conferred upon him, the salary amounting to £1,600 per annum. Nobody recognised more sincerely than the present Government the need for searching reform as to the allocation and discharge of the duties of public servants. Much had already been done in that respect; indeed, more could scarcely have been accomplished, seeing that the report upon which the Government were acting was only issued in March, 1887. They would continue in the course they had initiated, but some of the changes contemplated could not be effected without parliamentary sanction.

Mr. CHILDERS considered that the committee ought to be grateful to Mr. Jennings and Lord R. Churchill for the course they were pursuing.

Mr. JENNINGS repeated that some of the cases he had exposed were infamous jobs, which ought to be emphatically condemned by Parliament and the country. (Cheers.)

Mr. LABOUCHERE argued that the economies of the Government were made at the expense of the humbler classes and to the advantage of the upper classes.

Mr. RADCLIFFE COOKE hoped that the First Lord of the Treasury would be able to give such assurances as would fully satisfy those of his followers who were disposed to accompany Mr. Jennings into the division lobby. (Ironical cheers.)

Lord R. CHURCHILL agreed that the Treasury were often absolutely powerless. For instance, in 1886, it was generally conceded that a certain appointment ought to be abolished; but it was again filled up by the Lord Chancellor, despite all opposition. By supporting the proposed nominal reduction, therefore, the committee would most effectually strengthen the hands of the Government. (Cheers.)

Mr. W. H. SMITH said he had uniformly welcomed the assistance of the House of Commons in attempting to deal with extravagance or abuse. He recognised that the Government was responsible for conducting the affairs of the country, without reference to party, with efficiency and economy; but it should be remembered that it was their duty to maintain good faith with their servants, and to have regard to their statutory rights, confirmed by recent Acts of Parliament. He did not understand that hon. gentlemen desired that any man in the public service should be arbitrarily deprived of any right which he possessed under statute, under any ordinance, or under any contract. What he did understand was that there was a desire that this very large expenditure should be placed under review on the responsibility of the Government, so that no office as it became vacant should be filled up unless it was actually necessary, in their judgment, in the interests of the public service; that no vested right should be recognised to present to an office of emolument unless similar necessity was shown to exist; and that in either case the remuneration should not exceed what was just and reasonable. (Hear, hear.) During the past two years he had not filled up a single vacant office without first satisfying himself that its occupation was necessary, and he had at the same time reduced the salaries. This principle the Government proposed still to carry out so far as they had power to do so, and he would undertake that the whole matter of the report should be examined. If it became necessary to obtain further statutory authority they would not hesitate to ask Parliament for it. (Hear, hear.) In the meanwhile they were prepared to adopt the committee's report as a whole.

After some observations from Sir J. SWINBURNE and Mr. MOLLOY,

The committee divided—

The vote was agreed to.

On the vote of £6,243 for the expenses of London and Sheerness Police-courts,

Mr. PICKERSGILL pointed out the desirability of having female attendants at the police cells for female prisoners. He moved a reduction of £100.

Mr. STUART-WORTLEY said inquiries were being made with the view of seeing whether gaolers' wives and female searchers could not discharge these duties.

Mr. GRAHAM severely criticised the manner in which men and women were herded together in the cells of the London police-courts. The Paris police-cells were at least a hundred years in advance of ours. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MATTHEWS said improvements, in pursuance of the recommendations of the Committee which had investigated the matter, were being from time to time effected, and their completion throughout the metropolis was merely a question of time.

Mr. PICTON urged that female prisoners should be exclusively under the charge of female warders.

The Committee divided—

For the amendment 91
Against 150
Majority against ... ... —59

The vote was agreed to.

Upon the vote of £333,525 for the metropolitan police,

Mr. BRADLAUGH moved to reduce the amount by £1,500, on account of the salary of the Chief Commissioner. Although the amendment was necessarily directed against Sir C. Warren, he frankly avowed that his complaints were really levelled against the Home Secretary. Within the past few years a complete change had come over the attitude of the populace of the metropolis towards the police, whom they formerly regarded with something like respect. This change was due to the conduct of the Commissioner who had recently resigned, which conduct, he understood, was endorsed and approved by the Home Secretary.

Mr. MATTHEWS, who was received with Ministerial cheers, alluding to the allegation that the police had assaulted prisoners in custody, reiterated what he had already said, that a magistrate was the proper person to investigate charges of that grave kind, and that if the hon. member brought anything like a primâ facie case he would direct the Public Prosecutor to take the matter in hand. (Cheers.) He would not tolerate misconduct such as was complained of, but it must be satisfactorily established before the Home Secretary could take action. With regard to the transactions which led to the lamentable disturbances in Trafalgar-square, he had nothing to retract and nothing to regret. (Opposition cries of "Oh," and Ministerial cheers.) He fully accepted the responsibility of what was done. Nobody deplored more than he did the melancholy incidents which occurred. He observed the growth of the agitation with deep regret, and assured the committee that the steps which were adopted were absolutely demanded by the exigencies of the occasion. (Cheers.) He rejoiced at the admirable sense which the great majority of the inhabitants of the metropolis exhibited, and that they were once more able to enjoy Trafalgar-square with reasonable comfort. (Ironical Opposition cheers.) Very little good would be done by reviving the discussion, and he sincerely hoped that the matter would speedily be allowed to remain at rest. (Cheers.) As to the distribution of voting papers in Marylebone, he had nothing to add to the statements he had previously made on the subject.

Mr. S. MONTAGU regretted the refusal of the Home Secretary to permit a reward to be offered for the detection of the Whitechapel murderer. The people of Whitechapel felt that in a district where poverty and wretchedness prevailed perhaps in a more acute form than anywhere else in England, adequate police protection ought to be afforded. (Hear, hear.) The scare caused by the recent crimes had terribly reduced trade.

Mr. LAWSON demanded from the Home Secretary some declaration as to the future organisation of the metropolitan police, especially in view of the resignation of Sir Charles Warren. (Hear, hear.) Londoners earnestly desired it should be a civilian force under a civilian head. (Hear, hear.) They believed that during the last few years it had been systematically demoralised by its administration, and that the military idea had been the one dominant principle, much to the detriment of the force and to the danger of social order in the metropolis. The people were especially apprehensive as to the future, seeing that under the Local Government Act they were denied all voice in the management and control of the police. He quoted opinions against a militarising policy. He implored the Home Secretary to appoint as the successor of Sir Charles Warren a man in whom the public would have confidence—a man who would do his best to secure popular sympathy by arresting mischievous tendencies. If a soldier of the same type as Sir Charles Warren were selected, a fatal error would be committed. (Cheers.) He recommended him to try a man who had won his spurs in one of the great towns under municipal control. In any case, much depended on his choice.

Mr. FIRTH echoed the sentiments of the last speaker.

Mr. CUNINGHAME GRAHAM rose to continue the discussion, which at midnight, by the rules of the House, stood adjourned.

TERRY'S THEATRE.

There is no need for managers to go all the way to Paris or Berlin and pay extravagant prices for farces that have to be altered for the English market, and often ruined in the process, when they can obtain good, honest, home material spun for them by the new and clever partners, Mr. J. H. Darnley and Mr. George Manville Fenn. "The Balloon," the new farcical comedy produced with such success yesterday afternoon, is even a better play—brighter, happier, and more ingenious—than "The Barrister." There is nothing laboured about it; the authors do not appear to have got hold of one comic notion and to have beaten it out then into the conventional three acts; but, contrary to precedent, they commence slowly, continue brilliantly, and wind up with a fine spurt at the finish. As a rule, three-act farces begin at fever heat and end in smoke. Our clever authors work on a different system. They start gently, and keep their surprises and strength until they are wanted. As in "Confusion," the complications and wild misunderstandings turn upon a dog. The friend of a harassed doctor has played "the very dickens" with his medicine bottles, and has, with malice prepense, put an end to the existence of a lady's favourite St. Bernard. By an easy process of misleading, the perplexed practitioner is made to believe that he has accidentally murdered his future mother-in-law, and actually signs her death-certificate, which the old lady discovers. Irritated to a point of frenzy by an old flame who possesses his compromising letters, worried by a bibulous sponge who borrows money from him, pursued by the police, and afraid to meet his innocent little sweetheart, to whom he is to be married on the morrow, the despondent doctor goes up to the clouds from this wretched earth in a balloon, just inflating at Dover, to cross the Channel. His description of the ascent and descent gave Mr. Charles Glenney an opportunity for a comic recitation that made the house roar with laughter. Here, indeed, will be found the strong merit of the play, that it gives all concerned an opportunity of burlesquing and exaggerating the ordinary and simple incidents of daily life, and of turning them to account in straightforward and sound comic acting. Mr. Glenney has seldom had a better opportunity of showing that earnest irritability, that comic perplexity and almost tragic despair, of which he is a master in this class of play. His description of the balloon adventure is in the true spirit of comic acting, for at the funniest moments he is as grave as a judge. Admirably contrasted with this frenzied medico is the half-tipsy, always amusing Aubrey FitzJohn, an adventurer of the first water, who has in him the ingredients of Micawber, Costigan, Captain Wragge, and the "Old Sport" in a popular American play. The character is shown forth with rare humour and eccentricity by Mr. Charles Groves, who seems to revel in the funny situations in which the amusing scoundrel is placed. That clever actress, Miss Susie Vaughan, whose acting has so much style, is well placed as the handsome thorn in the wretched doctor's side; and the play had the assistance of Mr. Forbes Dawson, Miss Florence Wood, and Miss Gabrielle Goldney, who were all seen at their very best. The only weak spot in the cast was the old lady, who has an important part to play in the puzzle. Miss Caroline Elton did not appear to appreciate the humour of the character entrusted to her. With this exception all was well, and if "The Balloon" were put up at any London theatre to-morrow, and as well acted as yesterday, it would be safe for a run of some hundreds of nights. It is quite as funny and as bustling as "Confusion," and the idea contained in it is fresh and hearty. No need to say that the authors were called. They deserved the congratulations they received, and these were unanimous.

THE COLSTON BANQUETS.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach was present at the annual dinner of the Dolphin Society, in commemoration of the anniversary of Edward Colston, the Bristol philanthropist of the seventeenth century, which took place last evening in the Victoria Rooms, Clifton.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, who was loudly cheered on rising to respond to the toast of "Her Majesty's Ministers," said he could re-echo the hope of the proposer of the toast, that, however long he remained a member of the Government, long years might pass before he relinquished the representation of Bristol West. (Cheers.) No doubt it had recently been the fashion of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues to pile every epithet of abuse that they could spare from their previous Liberal colleagues upon the heads of the Government. But he did not think that Lord Kimberley, who was speaking at the Anchor dinner, would be quite in tone to follow that example. If he should be tempted to quote Mr. Gladstone's description of the Irish Government as "a fabric of infamy and disgrace," he might possibly remember that for eighteen months he himself administered that very Government as its head. If he should wish to expend his eloquence in denouncing the present Administration for their contempt of the law in Ireland, conscience might make him rather uncomfortable as to certain high-handed but very necessary proceedings taken by himself against a certain newspaper, known as the Irish People, when he seized its plant, suspended the paper, and imprisoned its staff. If he should wish to dwell upon what Mr. Gladstone had described as the shame, the inhumanity, and the brutality of associating what he called political prisoners, but what he (Sir Michael) would rather call politicians who had broken the ordinary law, with ordinary criminals, history might remind him of his treatment of the Fenian convicts, and how he necessarily and rightly held in prison, without trial, for months hundreds of persons in Ireland, under the powers given by the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, which in those unregenerate days was passed at a single sitting of the House of Commons, on a Sunday morning, without a protest even from the most sanctimonious Scotch Radical. (Laughter.) Therefore, though he did not doubt that the Anchor audience would hear a good deal of criticism of her Majesty's Government, he thought they would hear it couched in a more temperate vein than that which had distinguished the leader of the Home Rule party. He might be told that it was absurd to compare the Fenian rebellion with the moderate and constitutional movement presided over by Mr. Parnell. The methods were certainly different. The Fenians were bold enough to break out into open rebellion. Nowadays the Government had a much more difficult task to deal with in a craftily-veiled rebellion. But both were animated by the same spirit of disaffection and plunder, and he did not believe a single member of the Parnellite party would deny that his object was the same as that of the Fenian Brotherhood. What was wanted was some definite statement as to the real plan of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues. Surely Mr. Gladstone did not go to Birmingham to win the applause of an idolatrous crowd called together from all parts of the country, in a town which he himself admitted, and which the recent municipal elections had proved, to be adverse to his views? Surely he intended by reason and argument to convert people among whom he went, but not even his most bigoted partisans could say he made anything like a real attempt at that end. Let it be admitted that the relations of the inhabitants of Ireland with the people of Great Britain were unsatisfactory, that Irish disaffection was a weakness to the Empire, that her Majesty's Government had no agreeable task in enforcing the law, still the Unionist contention remained that, granting the existence of these evils, Mr. Gladstone's remedy was worse than the disease. A hundred years ago a plan very similar to Home Rule was actually tried in Ireland, and statesmen as able as ever guided the destinies of this country were compelled for the welfare—nay, for the very preservation—of the Empire to put an end to that experiment. It was only a part of the Gladstonian cant to talk about preserving the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament while at the same time establishing a separate executive and Legislature for Ireland. The old plan was dead. The Irish said they wanted something better. Yet no plan had been presented at Birmingham to the country. Why was this? Because it was easier for Mr. Gladstone to win a cheer from those who hated all authority by his denunciations of the acts of the Government in performing their bounden duty and establishing the authority of the law in Ireland—to captivate the unthinking masses by his eloquence and to move them by his sentimental appeals—than to unite his present followers in support of any definite scheme. If a crisis should ever occur, when the nerve of the English nation would be again tried, sensible Englishmen would turn with disgust from the spinner of words, however eloquent, to the record of good work, well done, of the Ministers whose care, courage, and foresight had done something for the safety of the country. (Loud cheers.)

Lord Kimberley was one of the principal guests at the Anchor Society's banquet. Responding to the toast of "The Liberal Party," proposed by Mr. Asquith, M.P., Lord Kimberley said he came before them as a man who had changed his opinions upon the most vital question of the day—that of Ireland. He was conscientiously persuaded that the policy of the last eighty-eight years had been a failure and a mistake. When he came to consider whether he could agree with the new policy, he was greatly influenced by the authority of Lord Spencer. A more perfectly-fitting instrument of a coercive policy than Mr. Balfour could not be found. Mr. Balfour added to his advocacy a spirit of cynicism and mockery which altogether marked him out as a man to make the iron enter into the souls of Irishmen. Mr. Balfour's policy would fail. Able though he was, he would fail, because there was an undying spirit in the Irish nation.

PRICES FOR FUTURE DELIVERY.

New York, Nov. 13.—Wheat opened weaker at ⅛c decline, and prices fluctuated immediately, with early sales as follows: December, 110¼, 110⅛, and 110½, and May, 117. Bears sold somewhat freely early in the day, but afterwards covered, causing the market to advance, and though the export demand was small the closing is barely steady, with values ⅛c higher. On the curb May was quoted at 117¼.

Sales, futures, 4,128,000 bushels; spot, 18,000. Receipts, 40,000 bushels; same day last year, 133,468. Clearances, 10,000 bushels.

To-day	110	111	112⅜	—	117⅛
Yesterday	109⅞	110⅞	112⅜	—	117

Corn was unchanged at the opening, and afterwards declined, mainly owing to bears selling. Outsiders have sold somewhat freely. There was only a moderate export business, and the closing tone is weak, at ⅛c to ⅝c decline.

Sales, futures, 448,000 bushels; spot, 147,000 bushels. Receipts, 180,000 bushels; same day last year, 165,676. Clearances, 110,000 bushels.

Petroleum Pipe Line Certificates opened unchanged, at 86½, and have varied but little during the day. The closing is steady, at 86¼.

Sales, 1,557,000 barrels; pipe-line runs, 64,000 barrels; shipment from regions, 141,000 barrels.

Copper has been less active, owing to buyers and sellers being widely apart. The closing quotation for December delivery is 17 40.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Wheat was weaker at the opening at ⅛c decline, but later in the day the market improved owing to shorts covering, and the closing tone is steady at ⅛ to ⅛c advance. On the curb May was quoted at 115¼.

Receipts, 330,000 bushels; same day last year, 842,643 bushels.

ANCIENT ART NEEDLEWORK.

For the fourth year in succession Messrs. Howell and James, Regent-street, have opened their exhibition of antique needlework, weaving, and embroidery. Admirers of the wondrous skill and industry, delicate colouring, quaint designs, durable material, and a thoroughness which time has not impaired will appreciate this collection, since year by year it becomes more difficult to form. The art and the artists alike have passed away, and it is now a question of gathering from secluded parts of Spain, Italy, and the East, or private treasures of connoisseurs examples that may serve for partial imitation to modern workers. First of the specimens should be seen the drawn work, Italian, Spanish, and Greek, which merges gradually, or, as the scientist would say, develops into the chastest of Greek, or more properly Italian lace. One of the finest pieces of this style ever seen—an antique cover of drawn thread worked over in point lace stitches, with border of pillow-lace—has been secured for South Kensington. A division of the tasteful catalogue which Messrs. Howell and James have prepared is set apart to laces—those kinds of lace in which a netted foundation is made to imitate hand-drawn work, the design being darned into the meshes. Many of the embroideries, especially the Spanish and Portuguese, are very rich. Of the brocades a few are Italian and Spanish, but the larger proportion are choice and varied examples of Louis XIV., XV., and XVI. styles. Besides these classified specimens there are some 6,000 fragments of old needlework and ancient brocades. A unique feature of the collection is a complete costume of yellow brocade, worn as a wedding dress by a Devonshire lady, the material, a fine example of weaving, being probably an heirloom of much older date.

A seat in the Common Council, held by Mr. S. Ward, as one of the representatives of Walbrook, has been declared vacant.

In common with the other members of her Majesty's Privy Council holding or having held high judicial offices, the Right Hon. Stephen Woulfe Flanagan becomes a member of the Judicial Committee of that body by virtue of the Appellate Jurisdiction Acts of last year and 1876.

I Cannot Thank You Enough for Cuticura.—"Cuticura Remedies have cured me of a most dreadful disease known as eczema. After trying two very skilful physicians, they promised me a cure, but said it would take months, and that it would make its appearance again at any time. I cannot thank you enough for your Cuticura Remedies. I paid sixteen shillings for them. Before that, I spent nearly sixteen pounds, and received no relief, giving up one situation. Again thanking you, allow me to say if you know of any one who does not believe this, you may refer them to me, and I shall be pleased to answer them.—H. M. L." Address of H. M. L. supplied by F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-street, London, E.C. Send stamp for "How to Cure Skin Diseases." 64 pages, 300 diseases, 50 illustrations, and 100 testimonials.—[Advertisement.]

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, Nov. 13.

(Before Mr. Registrar Linklater.)

Re J. Scott.—This bankrupt, who was described as a bootmaker, now applied for his discharge. The statement of affairs showed liabilities £1,328 11s 7d, and assets £215.—In reply to the official solicitor, the bankrupt said that he began business in the Minories, and in 1883 was adjudged bankrupt, his liabilities amounting to £16,128, with assets nil. In the same year he opened a shop in the Ladbroke-grove-road, and in 1886 purchased another establishment in Grove-terrace. In March last he sold the last-named business to his son, who was then under age, and had formerly been in his employment at 15s a week, but the validity of the sale was disputed by a judgment creditor, and the stock was sold by the sheriff under an execution. He had not kept a ledger or any account of his trade and household expenditure.—His honour suspended the order of discharge for nine months.

Re Austin Brereton.—Mr. Brereton, who is described as of Barnard's Inn, dramatic critic, also of the County Theatre, Reading, the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton, and of the Opera House, Burnley, presented his petition. A receiving order was made on the application of Messrs. G. and W. Webb. The assets are estimated at about £15. The amount of the debts did not transpire.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MARYLEBONE.—Whitechapel Mania.—A very painful scene occurred in court on the hearing of a charge against Philip Gad Cornish, 23, a schoolmaster of Ratling Hope School, Pontesbury, near Shrewsbury, Salop, who was said to be a lunatic wandering at large. Before being brought into the court the poor fellow was heard shouting and kicking violently at the door. When brought in by two officers both his hands were tightly pressed on the top of his head, his eyes were glaring, and he generally presented a very distressing appearance.—Police-constable 192 F stated that he found the man in Praed-street, about five o'clock on Monday, evidently mad, and arrested him. There was a companion with Cornish. The officer's evidence was frequently interrupted by the violent behaviour of Cornish, who shouted out at the top of his voice, threw himself about and stamped with his foot, and demanded that the witness, who was, he said, the son of perdition, should be made to tell the truth.—The young man who had accompanied the prisoner said he was a blacksmith. On Monday morning Cornish asked him to accompany him from Ratling Hope to London, as he had been appointed to come up and catch "Jack the Ripper," the perpetrator of the Whitechapel murders, for which he was to receive a large sum of money. The witness thought it was all right, so he left his work and accompanied the schoolmaster, and they arrived in London in the afternoon. He thought Cornish was all right when they started, but he saw a change come over him while on the journey.—Mr. de Rutzen directed that the sufferer should be taken to the workhouse in a cab.

WESTMINSTER.—False Alarm.—Fanny Phillips, 42, was brought before Mr. D'Eyncourt for being drunk and disorderly at Carey-street, Vincent-square, Westminster.—Constable 64 A deposed that at one o'clock yesterday morning he heard loud screams in a woman's voice of "Murder" and "Jack the Ripper has got hold of me." He rushed across Vincent-square, which at that time was deserted, and found that the prisoner was screaming, and knocking at the door of a house where she had formerly lived. Great excitement was caused in the locality.—Mr. D'Eyncourt sent her to prison for four days.

CLERKENWELL.—A Warning.—John Avery, aged 43, a ticket writer, of Southwick House, Vicarage-road, Willesden, was brought up for being drunk and disorderly in York-road the previous night.—John Carvell, a private in the 11th Hussars, said that on Monday night he was standing at the corner of York-road, Islington, when the prisoner came up to him, caught hold of him, and said, "I'm Jack the Ripper; I'll show you how I do all the lot." Witness told him to go away and not to talk nonsense, but Avery, who was intoxicated, followed him and threw his right arm round his neck. A scuffle ensued, and witness's nose was scratched. He shook off the prisoner, who said, "Come and have a glass of beer and I will tell you a secret, and you can make some money." They accordingly went into the Duke of York public house, Caledonian-street, and there, in the bar, Avery repeated two or three times that he was "Jack the Ripper." Witness then thought it best to give him into custody, and accordingly dragged him outside and gave him in charge of a police officer who was on duty near by.—Mr. Bros (to the accused): You have done an exceedingly foolish and wicked thing. I shall send all persons who are brought before me for acting as you have done to prison without the option of a fine. You will be imprisoned for fourteen days, with hard labour.—The Prisoner: Do not send me to prison; it will ruin me. Cannot you fine me?—Mr. Bros: No, I will not; you must go to prison.—Avery was removed to the cells.—John Brinckley, 40, a porter, of Wilmington-place, Clerkenwell, was charged before Mr. Bros with being drunk and disorderly in Goswell-road late the previous night.—Police-constable 192 G proved seeing the prisoner drunk in Goswell-road, with a woman's skirt on over his other clothes. There were several persons round him, and he cried out, "I'm Jack the Ripper! I'm going down the City-road to-night, and I'll do another there." The constable took him into custody.—Brinckley, in defence, stated that he did not remember putting on the skirt; some one must have put it on him for a lark. All he said was that he would "try and find Jack the Ripper."—The gaoler said he knew the prisoner to be a hardworking man, but he often acted foolishly, and had on more than one occasion been fined at this court.—Mr. Bros: You were not only drunk, but you played the fool under circumstances which might lead to serious mischief. There is a great deal of public excitement just now about a particular matter, and I will send you to prison for fourteen days.—The prisoner begged for a fine to be imposed, but the magistrate peremptorily refused, and Brinckley was removed to the cells.

SOUTHWARK.—Cabmen and Masters.—Mr. Edwin Palmer, cabproprietor, of Horseshoe-yard, Newington-causeway, appeared before Mr. Wyndham Slade in answer to a summons for libel.—Mr. Besley prosecuted for the Cabdrivers' Mutual Aid and Protection Society; and Mr. Forrest Fulton appeared for the defendant.—Mr. Besley explained that Mr. Palmer was the owner of cabs plying at the London Bridge and Victoria stations. The men using his vehicles recently had a dispute with him, and decided not to take out his vehicles, and they all had their licenses returned. Then the defendant sent out a lithographed list of the men who had been working for him to the cabowners in London; not only giving their names, but their addresses and badge numbers, and against the names of many were stars. At the end was a foot-note as follows: "P.S.—Please observe by the crosses opposite the names the degree of leadership in the organisation of the strike, thus—Three stars, principal ringleader; two stars, strong supporters of ringleader; where blank, nothing known against them, but simply followers of the others.—(Signed) Yours truly, Edwin Palmer." The result was that the men could not get work, and Mr. Besley contended that the defendant had libelled the men by innuendo.—Mr. Fulton urged that in reality no libel had been proved, but Mr. Slade decided to send the case for trial, and accepted the defendant's own recognisances in £40 for his appearance.

WANDSWORTH.—Serious Charge.—Susannah Pride, a young woman, living at 24, Wayland-street, Clapham Junction, appeared to answer a summons, at the instance of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, for unlawfully making use of the means of communication to the guard of the train without reasonable excuse.—Alfred George Ethridge, a guard in the employ of the company, deposed that at midnight on Monday he was in charge of a train from Victoria to West Croydon, and before arriving at Clapham Junction the communication cord was pulled. On reaching the station he walked along the platform.—The Clerk: Did you stop the train?—Witness: No. We were about a hundred yards from the station.—Mr. Plowden (with surprise): You really took no notice? That seems extraordinary. Supposing it was a case of life or death, would you have pulled up?—Witness: No; the train was too near the station.—Mr. Plowden: It might make all the difference to a man's chance of life.—The witness went on to say that the defendant complained of having been assaulted by a gentleman, and showed her wrist, which was slightly scratched, evidently by a pin. The gentleman denied the allegation and continued on his journey. Mr. Arthur Vivian, residing at Wandsworth-common, the passenger accused of the assault, said that on the night in question he entered the train at Victoria Station. The defendant and another woman came into the same compartment, but her companion left as the train was starting. During the journey the accused said "Good evening." He replied in the same words. She then sat opposite him and demanded £5 from him, or she would charge him with assault. He indignantly refused her demands, but she again asked for money, and behaved like a madwoman, walking about the carriage, and assuming threatening attitudes. He remained the whole of this time sitting in the corner reading his newspaper. She seized hold of the bell-handle and pulled it out.—In answer to questions, witness denied knocking the woman's hat over her eyes and threatening to throw her out of the window. He absolutely denied having used any violence.—Mr. Plowden: How came she to ring the bell?—Witness: It was an attempt to extort money.—Mr. Plowden: That might be a reason for threatening to pull the bell, but she did it.—After some further evidence, Mr. Plowden said it was a most extraordinary case. One of two things were perfectly clear—either that the gentleman did assault her, or else she trumped up a charge in order to extort money. If her story be true, she could have no more reasonable or sufficient excuse. It would be unfair for him to assume that the gentleman's story was true and the defendant's false. He dismissed the summons, and expressed an opinion that the official was to blame for not stopping the train. It was obvious that the apparatus was meant to be used in cases of extreme emergency, so that the train might be pulled up at once and assistance rendered. This case might have been one of that character, and to have delayed stopping the train until it reached the station might have been to decide a matter of life or death.

Trafalgar-square Anniversary.—About 5,000 persons assembled on Clerkenwell-green last night "in celebration of the anniversary of Bloody Sunday." Several bands were present, and the contingents from various Democratic, Socialist, and Radical clubs carried flags and banners. A resolution was carried at all the platforms calling for the release of George Harrison, for the freedom of meetings in Trafalgar-square, and for the dismissal of Mr. Matthews, the Home Secretary.

Execution at Newgate.—Levi Richard Bartlett was hanged at Newgate at eight o'clock yesterday morning, for the murder of his wife at Poplar in August last. Berry was the executioner. Death was instantaneous. Several hundred persons gathered outside the gaol to witness the hoisting of the black flag.

Death from Excitement.—The brig Granito was driven ashore yesterday morning between Seaton Carew and the mouth of the Tees. The Seaton lifeboat went to the rescue of the crew, but could not closely approach the vessel before she broached to. All on board were drowned, except a youth, who was picked up in a very exhausted state by a tug. A lady named Strover, who was watching the wreck from the beach, became so agitated and excited that she suddenly died.

The Tortures of Rupture may be Permanently Cured by Harness' New Hernia Appliances and Treatment.—Mr. Robert Ford, Cowleigh-road, North Malvern, writes, Oct. 6, 1888: "After four months' trial of your new rupture treatment and appliance I may now safely say that I am completely cured." Sufferers may save themselves a lifetime of torture by adopting this, the only reliable treatment. Examination free by an experienced and skilful surgeon at the Electropathic Institute of the Medical Battery Company (Limited), 52, Oxford-street, London, W. (corner of Rathbone-place).—[Advertisement.]

Throat Affections and Hoarseness.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are sold everywhere at 1s 1½d per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious pulmonary and asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government stamp around each box.—[Advertisement.]

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

DERBY NOTES.

The fields were not so large at Derby on the second day as on the first; they were, at the same time, quite large enough to give another big return, and the shades of evening were closing in rapidly before Pioneer had passed the post a gallant winner of the Doveridge Stakes. The afternoon had never been a bright one, and the only thing to be thankful for from a weather point of view was that the rain proved less continuous than had been the case during the night and the early hours of morning. So serious had been the downpour that the canal and the river were bank high, and the Midlands will be in a state of flood if there is not a quick change. The Prince of Wales and the party invited by Lord and Lady Hindlip to meet his Royal Highness at Doveridge Hall, arrived just as the numbers were being hoisted for the Quorndon Plate. This proved an easy affair for Harlow, as during a compulsory retirement from active service extending over more than a twelvemonth, Aintree has much degenerated. The state of the ground caused Corbeille to decline the Friary Nursery, and Enoch's stable supplied the favourite in Choufleur, who will be remembered in connection with an overthrow of Houndsditch and Yard Arm here. He cut a poor figure, and Master Bill, in company inferior to that he met last week at Liverpool, won easily from Grouse, who alone made the semblance of a fight. With a sheet of water on the far side of the course, where the brook is dug out, the Stewards decided that it should be missed in the Prince of Wales's Handicap Steeplechase. Neither Savoyard nor The Fawn renewed their Liverpool antagonism of Magic and Merry Maiden, of whom the one was accompanied to the post by stable companions in Bay Comus and Forest King, and the other by a single comrade in Bertha. The field was completed by The M.F.H., who fared no better than in the Sefton Steeplechase last week, and after toiling in the rear he returned home by a short cut. Although Merry Maiden was in more demand than Bertha she did not prove such a formidable antagonist to Magic, and in spite of the fair and reasonable allowance for the Liverpool defeat, dropped back well beaten in the straight. From the last hurdles, however, we were treated to a close finish, the excitement of which added to the ovation produced by the neck victory of Magic, the enthusiasm far exceeding the demonstration of last week. The heartiness of the display was due, of course, to the presence of the Prince of Wales, who seemed highly delighted at the success of his colours. The match between Noble Chieftain and Brooklyn led to a considerable diversity of opinion, and few of his admirers anticipated such a decisive verdict for the conceder of weight. There was never any doubt in running, and, although Brooklyn seemed to struggle gamely enough on this occasion, Noble Chieftain had taken his measure a quarter of a mile from home. In the continued absence of Weldon from the saddle through illness, Tom Cannon carried Lord Penrhyn's handsome colours, and he was likewise on the back of Whitelegs in the Allestree Plate. The chesnut from Danebury, who had previously shown himself a mudlark at Goodwood, carried too many guns for Greenwich, and the pair from the distance came away by themselves. Some of the money landed by the stable over Whitelegs must have been invested upon Betelgeux, as this colt, one of the bottom weights of a party of fifteen, left off second favourite to the penalised St. Symphorien in the Chatsworth Plate, with plenty of money also in the market for Nina. The winner was found beyond this trio, and Albertus, who had been unsuccessful the whole of the season on the hard ground, chopped the field up in a style that recalled his best two-year-old form. The runner-up to him, Harpagon, was too much of a handful for an apprentice, and before the fall of the flag he overpowered the boy, and could not be stopped until reaching the distance. Australia has trained very light since she made her début in the Middle Park Plate, and, as she was slightly coughing, she had, in the Doveridge Stakes, to be content with third berth to a couple of dark colts, Pioneer and Prebend. Of these, the former, a half brother to Gallinule, has all the makings of a nice colt, and, considering the liberal support he brings to the turf, it is satisfactory to chronicle a change in Mr. Abington's luck. To-morrow Hettie or Coraline may win the Belper Hurdle Handicap, Volscian Queen the Selling High Weight Handicap, Albertus or The Shrew the Chaddesden Handicap, Cotillon or Help the Queen's Plate, Hallowmas or Tortoise the Elvaston Castle Selling Plate, Button Park or Hugo the Derby Handicap, and Your Grace or Iddesleigh the Osmaston Nursery.

Sir R. Jardine's Cateran, 8st 10lb (allowed 5lb) (E. Bowen) 0
Mr. C. J. Cunningham's Blair Hope, 8st 8lb (allowed 5lb, car 8st 10lb) (Stanton) 0
Mr. A. Clark's Drayton, 6st 13lb (Wall) 0
Mr. A. Benholm's Maid of Lorn, 8st 12lb (R. Chaloner) 0
Mr. Fawcett's Cambalina, 8st 9lb (car 6st 11lb) (S. Chandley) 0
Mr. H. Grace's Gloucestershire, 6st 7lb (car 6st 3lb) (Blake) 0
(Winner trained by Jarvis.)

Betting—5 to 1 agst Choufleur, 6 to 1 agst Master Bill, 100 to 15 agst Blair Hope, 100 to 12 each agst Gaillarde and Drayton, 10 to 1 each agst Cambalina, Grouse, and Negligent, and 100 to 8 agst Miss Ethel.

Cambalina in centre got best away, and made play from Grouse and Drayton on the left, with Miss Ethel and Cateran on the right, and Choufleur and Master Bill well up in the centre until a quarter of a mile from home. Cambalina and Choufleur were then beaten, and Grouse took up the running, followed by Master Bill, who headed him at the distance, and won easily by a length; a bad third, Cambalina was fourth, Drayton fifth, Blair Hope sixth, Cateran seventh. The last three being Miss Ethel, Maid of Lorn, and Erfurt.

The PRINCE OF WALES'S HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE of 250 sovs; winners extra; entrance 5 guineas. About 3 miles.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales's Magic, by Beserker, aged, 11st 3lb (A. Hall) 1
Mr. H. T. Fenwick's Bertha, 4 yrs, 10st 3lb (H. Barker) 2
Capt. Childe's Merry Maiden, 6 yrs, 10st 6lb (W. Nightingall) 3
Mr. H. S. Evans's Bay Comus, aged, 12st 4lb (A. Nightingall) 0
Mr. Fairies' The M. F. H., 5 yrs, 10st 4lb (Capt. Lee Barber) 0
Mr. W. Bewicke's Forest King, aged, 10st (car 10st 2lb) (Owner) 0
(Winner trained by Jones.)

Betting—7 to 4 agst Magic, 4 to 1 agst Merry Maiden, 5 to 1 agst Bertha, 100 to 15 agst Forest King, 100 to 14 agst The M. F. H., and 10 to 1 agst Bay Comus.

Bay Comus cut out the work, followed by Bertha and Merry Maiden, with Magic and Forest King next, for half a mile, when Bay Comus refused, and left Bertha in front of Merry Maiden, with Magic third, well clear of Bay Comus, who was quickly got over, the other pair being some distance behind. Passing the stand Bay Comus drew to the front again, and went out of the straight, followed by Bertha, with Merry Maiden third, just in front of Magic. Merry Maiden took second place shortly afterwards, and there was no further change until a mile from home, when Bay Comus dropped back beaten. His retirement left the lead with Merry Maiden, Magic and Bertha side by side being next for a quarter of a mile, when Magic headed Merry Maiden, who was done with half a mile from home, and left Magic clear of Bertha. The latter rapidly made up her ground, and got to the neck of the favourite at the last hurdles. An exciting race ensued, but Magic answered gamely to the calls made upon him, and, just holding his own, won, amidst a scene of great enthusiasm, by a neck; Merry Maiden was a very bad third, and the rest were beaten off, and did not complete the course.

MATCH: 500, 100 ft. 5 Furlongs.

Lord Penrhyn's Noble Chieftain, by Fitzjames—Village Belle, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb (T. Cannon) 1
Lord Durham's Brooklyn, 3 yrs, 8st (W. Rickaby) 2
(Winner trained privately.)

Betting—5 to 4 on Noble Chieftain.

Noble Chieftain waited at the heels of Brooklyn to the distance, when he closed with the race in hand, and won by a length.

The ALLESTREE PLATE (welter handicap) of 200 sovs, by subscription of 5 guineas each; 3 ft; winners extra. The Straight Mile.

Mr. D. Henty's Whitelegs, by Albert Victor—Flora M'Ivor, 3 yrs, 8st 6lb (T. Cannon) 1
Mr. J. Dawson's Greenwich, 6 yrs, 9st 13lb (Watts) 2
Mr. G. E. Paget's Mariord, 3 yrs, 7st 7lb (car 7st 8lb) (S. Loates) 3

Mr. T. Wadlow's Titterstone, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb (G. Barrett) 0
(Winner trained by T. Cannon.)

Betting—3 to 1 agst Greenwich, 6 to 1 agst Queen Bee, 100 to 14 agst Whitelegs, 8 to 1 agst Easington, 100 to 12 each agst Wartaby and Volga, 10 to 1 agst Titterstone, 100 to 8 agst Tyrant, and 20 to 1 each agst Keramos, Lowdown, Camaralzaman, and Mariord.

Mariord, on the left, made the running from Greenwich and Whitelegs, with Tyrant on the right and Wartaby and Queen Bee next, until a quarter of a mile from home, when Mariord was beaten, and Greenwich took up the running, followed by Whitelegs, who headed him inside the distance, and won cleverly by three-quarters of a length; a bad third. Wartaby was fourth, Queen Bee fifth, Camaralzaman sixth, Keramos seventh, and Titterstone last.

The CHATSWORTH PLATE (handicap) of 500 sovs, by subscription of 5 guineas each; winners extra. About 5 furlongs.

Mr. G. Cleveland's Albertus, by Albert Victor—Veindara, 3 yrs, 6st 9lb (Wall) 1

Colonel Forester's Ice, 4 yrs, 8st 1lb (Rickaby) 0
Mr. H. T. Fenwick's Southill, 4 yrs, 8st (Fagan) 0
Mr. J. Hammond's St. Symphorien, 3 yrs, 7st 13lb (inc 7lb ex) (G. Barrett) 0
Mr. T. Jennings, jun.'s April Fool, 4 yrs, 7st 8lb (J. Woodburn) 0
Duke of Hamilton's Nina, 3 yrs, 7st 6lb (M. Cannon) 0
Mr. Brydges Willyams's Saucy Lass, 3 yrs, 6st 11lb (G. Chaloner) 0
(Winner trained by Golding.)

Betting—100 to 30 agst St. Symphorien, 5 to 1 agst Betelgeux, 7 to 1 agst Nina, 10 to 1 each agst Saucy Lass and Wise Man, 100 to 8 agst The Gnome, 100 to 8 agst Dog Rose, 100 to 7 each agst Harpagon and Albertus, 100 to 6 each agst Cataract and Southill, and 20 to 1 each agst Castlenock, Bullion, Ice, and April Fool.

A long delay occurred, and when the flag fell Ice jumped off in front, but, after going about a hundred yards, Albertus settled down with the lead, and was followed by Ice, Dog Rose, and St. Symphorien, with Cataract, Southill, Wise Man, and Harpagon heading the others, of whom Betelgeux was most prominent to the distance. Here Albertus increased his lead, and, having the race in hand, won in a canter by five lengths; a bad third. Cataract was fourth, St. Symphorien fifth, Nina sixth, Saucy Lass seventh, Wise Man eighth, April Fool ninth, Castlenock tenth, and Bullion last.

The FOSTON SELLING PLATE of 150 sovs; weight for age, &c.; entrance 3 guineas. About 1¼ mile.

Mr. A. James's Andrassy, by Van Amburgh—Toretha, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb (£100) (Watts) 1
General O. Williams's Symphony, 2 yrs, 7st 8lb (£100) (S. Loates) 2
Mr. T. Green's Lente, 2 yrs, 7st 8lb (£100) (G. Chaloner) 3
Mr. Townley-Parker's Novalis, 2 yrs, 7st 7lb (car 7st 8lb) (£100) (G. Barrett) 0
Mr. T. Jennings's Spider, 2 yrs, 7st 4lb (£100) (J. Woodburn) 0
Mr. G. Reynolds's Presto, 2 yrs, 7st 7lb (£100) (J. J. Griffiths) 0
Baron C. de Tuyll's Pelham, 3 yrs, 10st 4lb (£100) (Rickaby) 0
Mr. W. Lawson's Banana, 3 yrs, 8st 8lb (£100) (F. Barrett) 0
(Winner trained by Owner.)

Betting—7 to 4 agst Symphony, 100 to 30 agst Lente, 5 to 1 agst Andrassy, 8 to 1 agst Banana, and 20 to 1 each agst Novalis, Spider, Presto, and Pelham (offered).

On settling down Lente showed the way, and was attended by Novalis and Banana, with Symphony next and Presto last, to the mile post, where Symphony passed Lente, and the pair went on clear of Banana and Andrassy until half-way up the straight. Then Lente was beaten, and Andrassy, drawing to the front, won easily by a length; three lengths between second and third. Banana was fourth, Pelham fifth, Presto sixth, and Novalis last. The winner was sold to Mr. W. A. Jarvis for 300 guineas, and Mr. T. Green claimed Symphony for Mr. W. R. Marshall.

The DOVERIDGE STAKES of 500 sovs, by subscription of 15 guineas each; colts, 8st 10lb; fillies and geldings, 8st 7lb; with penalties and allowances; the second received 50 sovs out of the stakes. The Straight Mile.

Mr. Abington's Pioneer, by Galopin—Moorhen, 8st 5lb (S. Loates) 1
Duke of Westminster's Prebend, 8st 5lb (T. Cannon, jun.) 2
Mr. Milner's Australia, 8st 2lb (E. Martin) 3
Mr. T. Jennings's George, 8st 5lb (M. Cannon) 0
(Winner trained by Morton.)

Betting—5 to 4 agst Pioneer, 2 to 1 agst Australia, and 11 to 2 agst George.

George led from Prebend, with Australia last, for a quarter of a mile, when the latter took second place. She drew to the front after going half the journey, but was in trouble a quarter of a mile from home, and Pioneer assuming command at the distance, won easily by three-quarters of a length, the same between second and third.

Osmaston Nursery.—Marcia.

Colquhoun Sculls.—Yesterday the initial stages of the contest for the Colquhoun Sculls were got through. The weather was not favourable to the scullers, as they had a strong wind to contend against in the lower reaches of the Cam. The racing resulted as follows: First Heat.—A. L. R. Gaddum, First Trinity, 1; B. W. Crump, Jesus, 2; A. Hardie, Trinity Hall, 0. Won easily by eighty yards. Second Heat.—S. D. Muttlebury, Third Trinity, 1; H. W. Smyth, Third Trinity, 0. Won easily. Third Heat: P. E. Shaw, Lady Margaret, 1; A. G. Cooke, Lady Margaret, 0. Won by thirty-five yards. The final takes place to-day, when a good race is expected between Shaw and Muttlebury; the 'Varsity President is, however, looked upon as the ultimate winner.

"THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—In your issue of the 12th inst. in the review of the life of the late Earl of Lucan, you state that this charge still remains an "inexplicable mystery." As leader of the right squadron of the 11th Hussars, I send you my version of the battle, which I think explains matters and should clear up the mystery.

There were two large forces of Russian cavalry, one in full retreat after threatening the "thin red line," the other disorganised and retreating after its defeat by the heavy cavalry brigade. They had to cross the large plain in front of Balaclava harbour, in order to regain shelter behind the five forts taken by the Russians in the early part of the action. At the moment of retreat the 17th Lancers and right squadron of the 11th Hussars went threes right, and would have front-formed their squadrons, bringing them into line on the immediate flank of the retiring Russians. Unfortunately, the order was given to refront. Now, had the divisional leader of cavalry given orders for this movement the 17th Lancers and 11th Hussars could have made a charge, and, in my opinion, utterly routed the disorganised cavalry, and, with a troop of Horse Artillery and the rest of the Light Brigade, could in all probability have succeeded in "recapturing" the guns. The situation was simultaneously seen by Lord Raglan, who sent Captain Nolan with the "famed" order. Now, when the order arrived, and was given to Lord Lucan, time had elapsed, and when the written order was passed on to Lord Cardigan the Russian retreating cavalry were out of sight.

The Light Cavalry advanced, and charged down the Long Valley, on the other side of the five redoubts, with what result is well known.

Whether Captain Nolan, who followed by a short cut, intended to try and stop Lord Cardigan, or to join in the charge, will ever remain uncertain. I incline, however, to the former idea. He was almost the first man killed. Had the divisional leader taken the opportunity offered, as seen by Lord Raglan, he would have gained for himself a name, and carried out the idea conceived by Lord Raglan.

In after years I had an opportunity of conversing on the matter with Lord Cardigan, and, asking him why the 17th Lancers were not allowed to charge the flank of the retreating Russians, he told me he had peremptory orders in writing not to move without written orders from the position the cavalry held at the time. The opportunity for a brilliant display of cavalry tactics was lost.—Yours faithfully,

THE LEADER OF THE RIGHT SQUADRON, 11TH HUSSARS.

The Third Edition of
B. L. FARJEON'S STRANGE STORY,
DEVLIN the BARBER.
At all Railway Stalls and Booksellers'.
Price 1s.
"It possesses such high qualities of workmanship as should ensure more than a common success. But the tale has an original feature in the character of Devlin. This strange and weird conception is one of the happiest that has sprung from this writer's fertile fancy. . . . The powerful way in which he is presented, to enhance, by a mystery of character, the mysterious plot of circumstances, doubles the interest of an already fascinating story. The tale has humour, fancy, and a fine technical skill in mystery making. . . . Sure of a wide success."—Scotsman.

"A multitude of delighted readers."—Globe.
DEVLIN the BARBER. By B. L. FARJEON, Author of "The Nine of Hearts," &c.
Third Edition, price 1s.
"A curious, exciting, and fantastic story. . . . May lay claim to an amount of originality rare in these days. . . . Mr. Farjeon possesses an almost unique power of holding the reader's attention from the first page to the last."—Court Circular.

"Mr. Farjeon is certainly unrivalled."—Court Journal.
DEVLIN the BARBER. By B. L. FARJEON. At all Railway Stalls and Booksellers'.
Third Edition, price 1s.
"Will add no little to his fame. . . . Worked out in a most fascinating manner."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.
"'Devlin the Barber' surpasses them all. . . . Devlin is absolutely a new creation in fiction."—Figaro.
Ward and Downey, 12, York-street, Covent-garden.

SIMS REEVES: His Life. By Himself.
"The famous tenor's book is full of interest."—Dramatic Review.

SHORTHAND.—27, Chancery-lane.—(PITMAN'S.) METROPOLITAN SCHOOL (Ld.). E. S. Gunn, Principal; B. De Bear, Head Master. A week's membership only if desired. There is not a school in London with more than one or two teachers

EXCEPT the METROPOLITAN, which has 20 instruction rooms and 20 teachers and readers (men). The effect of this is, that it is the only establishment where adequate private or individual tuition for every pupil and separate practice for writers of all speeds concurrently. Open 10 to 10.

AVOID NEW SCHOOLS whose LOW FEES (dear for the return to their pupils), are a confession and an apology for a want of facilities for completing pupils. (Beginners do not know what facilities a shorthand school should possess.) But sooner or later their students discover this, and are at the additional expense of completing here. Anything short of practical efficiency is worthless, and means time and money wasted. This school owes its premier position to the fact that it devotes all the energies of its large staff to the one subject, Shorthand;

THEREFORE the METROPOLITAN SCHOOL'S RESULTS are the HIGHEST KNOWN. Soc. of Arts and Pitman's certificates. Its total exceeds that of all other schools in England combined. One thousand certificates recently obtained. Public reporting gold medal competition, all medals awarded. Tuition and practice until completed to pupils' satisfaction for a fixed fee (by instalments). Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

OLDEST and LARGEST SCHOOL. Estd. 1870. (Highest exam. results in the world.) Business men taught any time they can call. Private tuition. No class teaching. Separate school for boys. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

REPORTS of MEETINGS, LAW CASES, &c., by B. De Bear. Shorthand writers sent out to hotels, offices, &c. Free registry for clerks and employers. Inspect our list of vacancies, and obtain superior appointments.—27, Chancery-lane.

LADIES.—A large SHORTHAND SCHOOL, with separate teaching staff. Ladies, gentlemanly youths, and young men placed, employers prefer our practically trained pupils. The City Press says: "This school is the powerful factor for supplying shorthand assistants." Type Writing Separate School. Only one in London. Dictation practice any time.

BEST GIFT for a BOY: This SCHOOL'S COURSE of LESSONS. Tutors say boys knowing shorthand do best at all exams. To enable youths and gentlemen without business experience to take appointments, there are separate schools for BUSINESS HAND and BOOKKEEPING (KNOWLEDGE of BUSINESS rapidly acquired under a Chartered Accountant); Commercial Correspondence, Office Routine, Business, Banking, &c., taught practically. Send your son here for business acquirements on leaving school.—Business Training College. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

SHORTHAND.—SUSSEX SCHOOL of and BUSINESS TRAINING COLLEGE, Pavilion-parade, Brighton. Principal and staff of instructors from the Metropolitan School, London. No class teaching. Boarders reside with principal. Bookkeeping, penmanship, and typewriting. Prospectus post free.

SHORTHAND (PITMAN'S).—LOWEST FEES.—By instalments.—TAYLOR'S SCHOOL, six years Head Master of and assisted by staff from Metropolitan School. Proficiency guaranteed for fixed fee. Individual instruction. Typewriting, Bookkeeping. Appointments secured.—69, Chancery-lane.

WRITING, BOOKKEEPING.—Mr. HOUSTON (from Smith and Smart) guarantees proficiency in a short course of private LESSONS. Terms moderate. Business arithmetic and shorthand. Lessons by post.—Call or write, 75, Chancery-lane.

BOOKKEEPING, WRITING.—SMITH and SMART, 14, Wormwood-street, Bishopsgate-street, City, and 7, New Oxford-street, guarantee proficiency in a few easy, private lessons. Arithmetic and shorthand. Lessons by post. Est. 1840.

DANCING (HOW to LEARN).—"A moderate amount of reliable instruction by skilful and experienced teachers, with unlimited facilities for agreeable practice in spacious rooms, properly floored and ventilated." The London Academy of Dancing, Cavendish Rooms, Mortimer-street. The most complete and rapid system of instruction and practice. Prospectus.—EDWARD HUMPHREY, Principal. Vacancy for Articled Pupil.

DANCING.—Mr. and Mrs. SHERIDAN LINGS give LESSONS with Lady Assistants in all the fashionable dances. Private lessons any hour. Evening classes for waltzing, &c. Young ladies and junior class Saturday afternoons. Schools attended. 13, Portland-road, Holland Park, Notting-hill.

DANCING.—Mr. BLAND and DAUGHTERS beg to announce they give LESSONS in the new valse and all the fashionable dances. Four private lessons, one guinea. Assemblies Tuesdays and Fridays. Classes. The Ball Room Companion, 13 stamps.—17, New Oxford-street, W.C. (late of Golden-square).

DANCING.—Miss WOODHAM gives private instruction in all modern Ball Room Dances at 20, Baker-street, W. Perfect Waltzing in a few lessons. Prospectus. Classes. Schools attended. Pianists for private parties provided.

DANCING.—The HANOVER ROOMS ACADEMY, Argyll-street, W. Central and select. Efficient band, latest music, splendid floor. Assemblies Mondays, Wednesdays, Saturday; elementary, Thursdays, eight o'clock. Private lessons daily.

DANCING.—Mr. and Mrs. FIELD'S Select Classes. Saturdays, Thursdays, advanced; Mondays, Wednesdays, elementary. Special waltz instruction on Mondays, at eight. Quarter, 10s. 6d.; class, 1s. Beautiful floor. Schools and families attended. Private lessons.—44, Thornhill-square, Islington.

DANCING ACADEMY, 142, Old-street, City-road. PRIVATE LESSONS, with lady assistants, at any hour, 3s. each; four, 10s. 6d.; nine, 21s. Valse taught in one lesson. Elementary and advanced classes Tuesdays and Fridays. Quarter, 5s. Special valse class Mondays.—Prospectus J. Anderson.

DANCING.—To those who have never learned to dance.—Mr. and Mrs. WYNMAN, Daughter, and Ladies Assistants, beg to announce that they teach all fashionable ballroom dances (included new valse) perfectly in a few private lessons. Morning and Evening Classes. Prospectuses, Academy, 74, Newman-street, Oxford-street, W. Schools and colleges attended.

PUPILS REALLY taught to DANCE. Age immaterial. Fashionable slow waltz, reverse, ball room, and fancy dances. Private and class lessons. Schools and families.—Madame BONIFACIO, 5, Wetherby-terrace (corner of Earl's-court and Old Brompton roads), South Kensington.

A GENTLEWOMAN undertakes to TEACH the VALSE in six private lessons. 1½ guinea the course.—Mrs. PERRY, 17, Mackie-road, Addison-road, W.

FIRE.—The Committee of the BOYS' and GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL HOMES, Forest-hill, S.E., are urgently in NEED of FUNDS for carrying on the good work of sustaining these houses for the rescue of poor helpless children. To add to the anxieties of the Committee a fire has occurred, caused, it is supposed, by an incendiary, resulting in the total destruction of the stable connected with the Homes, and the burning to death of the pony and donkey used for carting the work made by the boys to residents in the neighbourhood. The building and animals were, unfortunately, not insured. Will some kind friends assist to make good the loss? The late Lord Shaftesbury was President of the Homes, which he himself opened, and to which he kindly gave his own name.—Subscriptions will gladly be received by the Secretary, T. G. LITCHFIELD, Boys' and Girls' Industrial Homes, Shaftesbury House, Ferry-rise, Forest-hill, S.E.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14.

Lord Savile, on his elevation to the peerage, took the oath and his seat in the Upper House yesterday. On the motion of Earl Spencer a second reading was given to the Oaths Bill, the Lord Chancellor intimating that in committee he would propose to amend the measure.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Pritchard Morgan (Gladstonian) took the oath and his seat for Merthyr Tydfil in succession to the late Mr. Henry Richard. Mr. Goschen stated that there was no intention on the part of the Government to withdraw their proposal for imposing a van and wheel tax. The Home Secretary explained that the sole ground on which Sir Charles Warren had tendered and the Government had accepted his resignation as Commissioner of Police, was that he declined to be subject to the instructions of the Secretary of State in regard to the publication in the press of any matter relating to the department. In reply to a question, the right hon. gentleman admitted that there had been previous occasions when, in consequence of differences, Sir Charles Warren had tendered his resignation. In Committee of Supply Mr. Jennings, supported by Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Henry Fowler, Mr. Labouchere, and others, moved the reduction of the vote for salaries and expenses of the Supreme Court of Judicature by way of protest against the extravagant sums paid to the holders of sinecures and underworked officials connected with the administration of the law. On a division the reduction was negatived by 148 votes to 129—majority for the Government, 19. Subsequently there was a long discussion on the Police vote, which was ultimately adjourned till to-day.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, speaking at one of the Colston banquets at Bristol last night, challenged Mr. Gladstone to give a definition of the scheme of Home Rule he intended to propose in place of the one he had abandoned, and ridiculed the idea that the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament at Westminster could be maintained while at the same time a separate Legislature was established in Ireland.

When the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the sweating system resumed their sittings yesterday, Mr. Nepean, the Director of Army Contracts, and Mr. Ramsey, the Director of Clothing, gave evidence relating to Government contracts, which now nearly always contained the factory clause. It was certain that one result of this had been almost to do away with the employment of outside hands.

An address, signed by the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster and the other Catholic prelates of England, has been sent to the Pope, expressing indignation at the new laws which have been proposed against the bishops and clergy of Italy, and praying that these and all other attempts against the liberty and independence of his Holiness may be brought to nought.

On the reassembling of the Parnell Commission yesterday the President reverted to a discussion which arose at a former sitting of the Court as to the admissibility of certain evidence. He observed that the Court never intended to lay down anything contrary to the dictum that hearsay evidence was not proof of the facts alleged, the opinion they expressed being that the fact that a particular report had been made by a person as part of his duty was admissible. His lordship added that certain documents, admittedly spurious, which had come into the possession of the solicitor for the Times, ought to be disclosed. With regard to other documents, their decision was that they ought not to be submitted for inspection. Patrick Kennedy gave evidence of being boycotted because, in defiance of intimations from the Land League, he continued to occupy a farm from which the previous tenant had been evicted. The other witnesses for the day were James Mannion and Peter Flaherty, both members of the Land League and of the Fenian organisation, who testified as to various moonlight outrages in which they and their comrades took part.

Two men were brought before Mr. Bros at the Clerkenwell Police-court yesterday, charged with being drunk and disorderly, and the evidence disclosing that they had been proclaiming themselves to be "Jack the Ripper," the magistrate sentenced each of them to fourteen days' imprisonment, without the option of a fine.

At the Stock Exchange, yesterday, a heavy fall occurred in American and Canadian railways on the news of rate cutting, and Mexican (Vera Cruz) issues were prejudiced by the poor traffic return. English lines, however, were comparatively steady. Foreign Government bonds gave way, due to lower Bourse prices. Copper and diamond shares showed dulness. An advance of 1-16 per cent. occurred in Consols.

TO-NIGHT'S Nonconformist banquet to Lord SALISBURY and Lord HARTINGTON is one of the most remarkable political facts of the day. Dissenters, as a rule, are not in the habit of consorting with Conservatives; their predilections generally link them with the most advanced section of the Liberal party. Yet the evolution of politics has forced them, on one great present question, to join hands with a Tory Prime Minister, and to prefer the leadership of a Whig Peer to the blandishments of Mr. GLADSTONE. The reason is very simple. There was a time when the Nonconformist Protestants of the United Kingdom were not supposed to be very loyal or very patriotic men. They were shut out from all the offices of the State, and even from local corporations. Their rights as citizens were denied or curtailed in every direction. The Universities refused to admit them, and all the educational endowments of the realm were monopolised by Churchmen. It was no great wonder that at such a time Englishmen who were Methodists, Baptists, Independents, or Quakers did not feel that warm regard for existing institutions which burned in the hearts of the favoured majority. Since the errors of old Toryism have been redressed, however, the loyalty and patriotism of the Nonconformists of the United Kingdom have been proved again and again. They have done the State good service in many capacities, while their municipal work and local munificence have been especially distinguished. Recently, when a question arose as to the disintegration of the United Kingdom, their record has been remarkably creditable. Their greatest laymen, Mr. John Bright and Mr. Chamberlain, have been bulwarks of the Unionist cause. Nearly all their distinguished preachers, including Mr. Spurgeon and Dr. Allon, have, with great pain but much energy, declared against Mr. Gladstone, for whom, personally, they have considerable respect. We have here the best proof that could be given of the wisdom which animated the Whig party two generations ago, when it demanded religious liberty. Its Tory opponents said that the Dissenters of the time were Levellers or Radicals, not loyal to the Throne, and not attached to the fundamental institutions of the country. The Whigs replied, "Redress their grievances, apply to them equal laws and good government, and in a generation or two they will be as loyal and contented as Churchmen themselves." The prophecy is fulfilled today by the Nonconformist Unionists, who rally around the flag of an United Kingdom, and denounce rebellion, separatism, disorder, and crime.

The chief interest of this evening, however, will attach to the presentation of an address from nearly all the Nonconformist ministers of Ireland to the Prime Minister and Lord Hartington. In this document they "deprecate in the strongest manner, as disastrous to the best interests of the country, a separate Parliament for Ireland, or any legislation tending to imperil the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland, or to interfere with the unity and supremacy of the Imperial Parliament." They believe that "there are no grievances removable by legislation which cannot be removed by the Imperial Parliament," and that "the establishment of a separate Parliament for Ireland would most seriously aggravate many existing evils, and would produce other evils greater than any that at present exist." They also point out that, as they live in Ireland, their opinion is entitled to more weight than the views of the English Nonconformists who recently addressed Mr. Gladstone, and who have "little or no personal knowledge of Ireland." It seems to us that it is very difficult to controvert these solid and sensible pleas from the Irish Nonconformists. In this matter the ministers who will address the two statesman to-night very directly and very emphatically represent their congregations. The views of a Church clergyman may not be the views of his parishioners; he has been presented, not elected, to the living, and may differ in politics, religious views, race, and even language, as in Wales, from the majority of his flock. A Nonconformist clergyman, on the other hand, has been specially chosen by his congregation, or is dependent on their contributions and goodwill for his salary and for the retention of his post. Therefore it may be fairly said that when the great bulk of the Dissenting ministers of Ireland speak up for the Union they represent the opinions and feelings of the Nonconformists of Ireland. Now, who are these men? Are they landlords? Hardly any—perhaps there are not a score of Irish landlords who are Protestant Dissenters. Are they officials? Only in a few instances. Some are manufacturers, who have created industries in the North, some are shopkeepers in the cities and towns. The great majority are artisans, farmers, and labourers, who live amongst the people and who belong to them, who are on good terms as a rule with their Catholic neighbours, and who understand the Irish Question, not, like Mr. Gladstone, from reading books, but by actual contact with the living facts. Considering how closely the national question has been of late mixed up with agrarian relations, the Ulster farmers have had great temptations to join Mr. Davitt's League, and to feel grateful to Mr. Gladstone for his Land Acts; but, while clinging closely to their old tenant-right, and setting a high value on their new privileges, they have refused to link themselves with Mr. Parnell, although he is Protestant like themselves. They have been repelled, in the first place, by "the crime that dogged the footsteps of the League," as Mr. Gladstone declared, and, secondly, they cling to the connection with Old England. They are loyal to the Queen; her name is never omitted at their banquets; the National Anthem is played by their bands, and never hissed by their audiences. They are proud of their heritage in the traditions of the realm, and will not relinquish their share in the glories and perils of the Empire. Mr. Gladstone proposed to hand over these men to the uncovenanted mercies of a majority in Dublin—the same majority which, inspired by a Socialistic craving, had infused terrorism into all the relations between man and man, had preached the open plunder of landowners, had proclaimed sympathy with every enemy of England, civilised and savage, and had hailed with delight every disaster to the English flag. On what principle of Liberalism or Democracy could Liberals or Democrats justify the subjection of Ulster freemen to a régime they abhorred, and to a Government they were sure to resist? Was Mr. Gladstone prepared to assist Mr. Parnell in shooting down the yeomen of the North, who to a certainty would refuse to obey the paper decrees of the Dublin Parliament? It will be argued that the Protestants of Ulster are a minority of the people of Ireland, and that it is right to use coercion in order to compel the submission of a million and a half to the dictation of more than three millions. The Irish Parnellites, however, constitute a minority of the United Kingdom; they amount at the highest reckoning to one-twelfth of the entire population. Why should their protest against union with thirty-three millions be listened to, when the objection of a million and a half Irish Protestants to association for good or ill with three million Irish Catholics is despised? If majorities are to rule, eleven-twelfths of the people of the United Kingdom have unquestionable rights. If minorities have claims, then the Irish Protestants should not be forced to obey rulers they detest.

These men are our own flesh and blood. Their chief offence is that they are too loyal, and that they love us too much. They should, Mr. Gladstone suggests, imitate their "grandfathers" who rose in rebellion and invited aid from France; but, because they have forgotten "Lord Edward," Wolfe Tone, and the traditions of the United Irishmen, they are spoken of with rancour by English statesmen. Surely the force of partisanship has never carried political leaders further or made them fare worse. Then there are English Nonconformists who say to them, in a patronising tone, "Do not be afraid of the Irish Catholics. Some of them we have met are most reasonable men. Throw in your lot with Munster and Connaught, and forget your overweening affection for England and English ways." Now, the Protestants of Ireland are not afraid of the Irish Catholics, as Catholics—there is very little religious bigotry in Ireland today—nor do they fear for themselves as Protestants. Many of them, however, are artisans whose prosperity depends on freedom and peaceful industry—two things fatally menaced by boycotting and disorder. Others, again, are owners of their farms, and do not like the Socialism that leavens the agrarian movement in the South. All of them are law-abiding men, and they abhor assassination and crime. Their reluctance to ally themselves with the revolutionary cause is therefore natural enough. But who are the English Nonconformists that advise them to lie down under the rule of Irish Catholics? They are men who now proclaim that their consciences compel them to declare for Home Rule. Yet how was it that this compulsion precisely dates from the morrow of Mr. Gladstone's conversion? Had they no consciences before the autumn of 1885? They were for years familiar with the Irish question; they talked of it at elections; they preached on it from their pulpits; they saw Mr. Gladstone, Lord Spencer, and Sir George Trevelyan applying to Ireland a Coercion Act much more severe than the present statute; but not one of them—not a single Abdiel amongst the whole group—rose up to denounce coercion and to declare for Home Rule. Nevertheless the moment such cries chimed in with the needs and dodges of a political party these holy men were "converted in battalions and baptized in platoons." They were Unionists one morning; the next they woke up earnest and conscientious Home Rulers. These are the men who say to the Irish Nonconformists: "Be quiet under the harrow: you disturb us by your groans; for the sake of getting Mr. Gladstone back into office we have surrendered our convictions and paltered with our consciences; why should not you do the same? Make terms with your adversary and haul down your too loyal and too Protestant flag." The Irish Nonconformists refuse; and who can blame them?

Sir Charles Warren's resignation of the post of Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police has naturally created a desire on the part of the public to be informed of the precise reasons which led to such a step being taken. Curiosity on this point is now set at rest by the definite statements made last night by the Home Secretary in Parliament. Mr. Matthews, "in order to avoid misunderstanding," read aloud to the House the correspondence which has recently passed between himself and the Chief Commissioner, and it will be seen from it how the opinions of the Home Secretary and of Sir Charles clashed on a most important and, indeed, a vital question of police administration. The immediate cause of dispute was the publication in a magazine of an article written by the Head of the Police, in which the management and discipline of the force were discussed at length. Such a publication was directly contrary to a minute which had been issued to the Police Force in 1879 by the Secretary of State of that time, and which Mr. Matthews again quoted in the letter he recently addressed to Sir Charles Warren. The practice, said the minute, of officers of the Police Force making communications to the press relating to their department was one which would lead to embarrassment, and must, in the opinion of the Home Secretary, be discontinued; no such communication was to be made unless sanctioned by the Secretary of State. This, it must be remembered, was no ukase issued by Mr. Matthews simply in order to punish Sir Charles Warren for being indiscreet enough to air his sentiments in print; it was a kind of police bye-law which was in force long before Mr. Matthews ascended the seat formerly occupied by Sir William Harcourt; and Sir Charles Warren, as the head of all the officers of the Police Force, was especially bound not to contravene its terms. Such, we believe, will be the opinion of every person qualified to judge of the matter; and we must allow that Mr. Matthews was acting quite within his right when he reminded Sir Charles Warren of the rule, and told him that it was intended to apply to every police official, from the Chief Commissioner downwards. At the same time the letter which Mr. Matthews caused to be addressed to Sir Charles was, to say the least of it, a trifle brusque; it reveals very plainly what was the character of the relations which existed between these two high public functionaries, to the obvious detriment of the community they both served. If previous divergences of view, even quarrels, had occurred, it was all the more needful for the Home Secretary, in reminding the Chief Commissioner of a duty which he had forgotten, to put the disagreeable truth in as pleasant a form as possible. Mr. Matthews, however, chose to administer the pill without the smallest suspicion of gilding attached to it, and the natural result was that the patient winced. Sir Charles Warren wrote back on the same day to say that, had he known that such a rule—the rule of not communicating police matters to the press—had been in force, he would never have accepted the post of Chief Commissioner; that he had been in the habit of correcting misstatements made against the police for three years past, and he held it extremely necessary that somebody in authority should be able to do so on occasion. So far there is not much exception to be taken to Sir Charles's letter, although he omits to take into account the obvious answer, that he could always have asked and obtained the permission of the Home Secretary to publish anything that he thought advisable. The Chief Commissioner, however, goes on to make the rather startling observation: "I have to point out that the Metropolitan Police are governed by statute, and the Secretary of State for the Home Department has no power to issue orders to the Police Forces." In conclusion, he "declines to accept these instructions," and "again" places his resignation in the hands of the Government. Mr. Matthews was questioned in the House as to the signification of the word "again," and replied that "there had been previous differences which had caused Sir C. Warren to tender his resignation." It is certainly high time that the official jars and wranglings which have disorganised the Police Force and imperilled the public safety should cease, but the resignation of a single and practically a subordinate official is so one-sided a remedy that Mr. Matthews should imitate Sir Charles Warren's example, and himself retire from an uncongenial sphere of duty.

Above and apart from all the personal questions raised by the correspondence read yesterday, there is the more important point as to whether the views of the Home Secretary or of the Chief Commissioner are correct. Was Sir Charles Warren justified in declining to obey instructions issued by a previous occupant of Mr. Matthews' office, and reiterated by that gentleman? The letter in which he expresses his inability to obey those orders has a look of insubordination about it; but then, if Sir Charles Warren's contention is right, there can be no insubordination, just because there was no power to promulgate the orders in the first place. In other words, Sir Charles believes the Home Secretary to be acting "ultra vires" in presuming to dictate to the Police Force at all. This, as we have said, is a very grave and a very startling proposition to lay down. It has always been accepted hitherto that the Home Secretary has a paramount control over the whole Police Force. All large expenditure incurred on behalf of the force, all matters of promotion, and so on, have to come before the Home Secretary for his ratification. The useful "Police Code," drawn up by Mr. Howard Vincent when he was Chief of the Detective Department, puts plainly what has been generally believed to be the case—that "the Metropolitan Police Force is under the direct control of the Secretary of State for the Home Department." Of course everybody will at once admit that for all ordinary purposes and on all but special emergencies the police of the Metropolis should be directed by the Chief Commissioner, to whom each constable should look as his chief. There may, however, and often do, arise occasions on which it is highly important that the Cabinet, acting through the Home Secretary, should be able to turn police energy or vigilance in some particular direction which is considered essential to public safety. It is impossible, therefore, to uphold Sir Charles Warren's view that, because he is appointed by statute, the Home Secretary can exercise no jurisdiction over him. The fact that any such proposition should have been seriously enunciated only shows once more the advisability of the Chief Commissioner having a certain amount of legal training and knowledge to fit him for his office. If there still remain any uncertainty as to the ultimate supremacy of the Secretary of State for the Home Department over the doings of the Metropolitan Police, then the matter should be set right at once by an explanatory statute. Sir Charles Warren may be of opinion that, in his capacity as a magistrate for the Metropolitan Counties, he is amenable to the Lord Chancellor, and not to the Home Secretary; but we believe that, as a matter of fact, he is accountable to both, and the effective right of control of the collective Cabinet over future Chief Commissioners should not be left in doubt, if any doubt really exists. Mr. Matthews, in accepting the resignation of the Chief Commissioner, acknowledged rather coldly the services rendered by Sir Charles to the Government, and at the same time declared that the claim to disregard the instructions of the Secretary of State was "altogether inadmissible."

There should, we repeat, be no mistake or possibility of mistake as to what the exact position at present is as regards the powers and responsibilities respectively of two such high public functionaries as our Home Secretary and the head of the Police Force in the capital of the Empire. When, however, that point is settled, there would remain to be considered whether our existing arrangements are what they should be; whether the maximum of police efficiency is secured with the least amount of public friction. There may very easily exist two opposite opinions as to what is ideally the best kind of government for a police army. Some will urge, with plausibility, that to give the Chief Commissioner nominal chief control while making him really subordinate to the Home Secretary is to lessen his sense of responsibility by diminishing his power. At best, it may be said, this system establishes a dual control over a force which by its nature and its duties calls emphatically for a single head to which it can look up, and which it can implicitly obey. If policemen, when they read an order of the Commissioner, say to themselves, "The Home Secretary very likely thinks differently," the discipline of the force may be expected to suffer. On the other hand, it can be argued that the force of orders issued by the chief of a department is not destroyed just because the chief is himself ultimately answerable to some higher authority. Take our railway system, for example. The traffic manager acts as a person capable of giving orders which must be rigidly obeyed, and which are not disputed; but he is himself under the control of the Board of Directors. A general in the field, in the same way, must render an account to the War Minister and the Ministry that send him out; but his instructions are none the less binding on his staff. As regards the management of our Police Force, we believe that the Chief Commissioner should be carefully chosen, and when chosen he should be interfered with as little as possible. It should only be in cases of emergency that he should be liable to be overridden; but the principle of the authority of the Home Secretary should never be lost sight of, and, even if he only interferes on rare occasions, his intervention, when it occurs, should carry with it immediate recognition. A corollary of this proposition is that the Home Secretary should himself be able to give his orders in a manner not sure to exasperate any Commissioner with a grain of self-respect in his composition, and this is unfortunately what Mr. Matthews has altogether failed to accomplish.

A mournful little tale, fraught with much warning for the fair, appeared in the letter of our New York Correspondent yesterday. It was about a young American lady, the belle of Indiana, whom Dame Nature had liberally endowed with charms, while Fortune had also conspired to make her as prosperous as she was beautiful. She was the daughter of a very rich Indiana merchant, and universally admired for her personal charms, including "two lovely blue eyes." Unhappily, however, instead of being content with these bounteous natural gifts, she wanted to improve upon them, beguiled by the advertisements of those traders upon the credulity and self-love of womankind who deal in nostrums to manufacture "lustrous orbs," "celestial complexions," "lips of ruby," and "sylph-like symmetry of form." Those blue eyes, which were bright enough already to dazzle a dozen devoted lovers, must shine brighter and more limpid still. She was induced accordingly to purchase and employ some villanous preparation warranted to add brilliancy to the orbs and pellucid splendour to the gaze of the dullest visual organs, and, of course, to make those which were lovely before more irresistible. Using this vile preparation in excess, the melancholy consequence was that very soon one of her eyes became so inflamed that it had to be removed, and the sight of the other was utterly lost, so that she is now totally blind, the victim of a vanity and rashness without excuse, but none the less deplorable and tragic. We are not informed what was the deleterious ingredient which has thus blighted the pretty American girl's life, and robbed her, at a blow, of all her beauty. There may have been too much belladonna in the quack's lotion, or sub-nitrate of bismuth, or a hundred other dangerous drugs, which are far too freely compounded with washes, cosmetics, and the like, not only in America, but here also. In any case, the sorrowful story is an admonition to the fair sex at large to be much more careful than is their wont how they give their belief to the countless fine-sounding commodities which are pressed upon their attention by the purveyors to female foibles. What can be more painful to imagination than the thought of this poor foolish damsel, deprived for ever of all the sights of that earthly life which opened so happily for her, hopelessly disfigured, and reduced to be a helpless dependent upon the guiding hands of others, all by her senseless eagerness to improve upon what Heaven had already so bounteously provided? One would like to hear that the vendors of so infernal a lotion had been prosecuted in the Indiana Courts, and punished condignly for thus murdering beauty for profit; but this consolation is not afforded, and, at best, it would not bring back the blue eyes for ever extinguished, nor lighten by a feather's weight the heavy and bitter load of self-reproach and anguish under which this most unfortunate "belle of Indiana" must be suffering.

Not even such a story as this, we are perfectly aware, will repress in feminine bosoms the fixed desire and the immemorial habit of improving, or trying to improve, upon Nature. From the beginning of time the sex has constantly sought to paint the rose and gild the lily—to heighten each charm which it possessed, or to supply them if deficient. And, within certain wise boundaries, this is legitimate enough, no doubt; or, at any rate, safe enough. For example, it is the custom all over the East to enhance the brightness of the female eye by touching the edge of the lower eyelid with a dark powder. This collyrium, which is known as "soorma," or "kohl" in India, and by other names in Arabia, Egypt, and elsewhere, is generally dust of antimony or black-lead, and, beyond question, when skilfully applied, it makes the pearl of the eye glitter with a striking contrast against the dark lid, and produces a decidedly "fetching" effect. Mothers in India quite regularly blacken thus the eyelids of their children, both female and male; and in Syria the one article which is sure to be found in a peasant's hut, along with the Koran, suspended in a bag, is the bottle of collyrium with a pointed stick for smearing, which lasts for years, although it is in use among the women of the family every day. A hundred proverbs are current, indeed, in connection with the apparent exhaustlessness of this simple and universal item of the Eastern toilette. Says one: "Seeing that the soorma wasteth, Seeing that the ant-hill grows, Little taking, little adding, live, give, learn, as life-time goes." Oriental poetry is full of allusions to the attractive appearance of the eye and lower lid thus delicately tinted with the shining "kohl," and no one ever heard of the slightest ill effect resulting from its application. Nor is it illegitimate for beauty to cultivate that arch and unsurpassed charm of sweeping eye-lashes by doing as the Eastern women do, who clip from time to time the extreme points of each lash, so as to stimulate its growth. Some in youth even cut the canthus of the orbit, in order to elongate the eye-space; but this is barbarous, and is occasionally punished by chronic weakness of the lids, though the lengthened eye, when all goes well, appears wonderfully languishing and high-bred. The simplest of such expedients, that of darkening the under eyelashes, has been largely introduced into the West; but the result upon a pale European face is wholly different from that obtained by the less violent contrast of the black lid above a brown cheek, and the little operation must be very skilfully performed by the fair imitator of the beauties of Damascus or Delhi, if they would not give themselves the aspect of ill-health or dissipation. Fashion and vanity, however, will make any innovation widespread. We are told from Paris that this winter ladies are to wear "mouches," or "patches," as in the old days of Louis XIII., Louis XIV., and the two following Monarchs. These patches, it is announced, will be coquettishly placed on dainty cheeks and alabaster shoulders, and will be sprinkled, when safely in position, with the dimmest suspicion of pearl-powder. Already the fashionable coiffeurs of Paris are rehearsing their parts, and practise the art of patching by planting "mouches" on the rigid features and immovable busts of the waxen effigies that adorn their shop-windows and hairdressing saloons. There are, it seems, to be new names for these embellishments. In the days of La Pompadour a patch under the eye was called "La Dangereuse," that under the chin "La Fatale," and that near the mouth "L'Assassine." What we are to call the modern mouches is not yet settled, but ladies with moles and freckles may be glad of this last freak of La Mode, which does but imitate what Nature has, with her own coquettish and innocent hand, applied to their charming countenances.

Is it of any use to reiterate what every honest coiffeur and every conscientious quack knows well, that health and wholesome habits are the real beautifiers, and that almost all cosmetics, powders, washes, and pomades are not merely poisonous, but moreover useless, compared with exercise, fresh air, and pure water? No roses can be grafted upon the cheek by the rouge-pot or the "bloom of beauty" like those which grow there spontaneously by temperance, early hours, refreshing sleep, perfect digestion, and a good and happy heart. Even the simplest of the pearl-powders and other such commodities with which ladies are wont to dab their faces, necks, and arms do mischief by clogging the pores, and interfering with the free action of the skin. Some of these are loaded with lead, with bismuth, with all sorts of noxious compounds, which produce real though gradual and unnoticed harm, and bring on premature senility and wrinkling. Devices for enhancing the lustre or fulness of the eyes by lotions are sure to be deadly, because, though there are many chemical substances which will temporarily affect the size of the pupil, and the glitter of the cornea, all of them are active poisons, and work by relaxing the delicate nerves and muscles governing the iris and the eyeball. We are by no means inclined to inveigh against the passion to be admired. It is natural, amiable, and, above all, established much too profoundly in the feminine heart to yield to argument or example. Nor is it to be denied that a judicious assistance may often be lent to Nature, who, it may be remarked, did not give her daughters combs when she bestowed on them golden and raven hair, nor tooth-brushes when she endowed them with pearly teeth, and has in many other ways indicated that she expects her work to be made the most of. Beauty, however, must be on her guard against what is not natural nor salutary; and especially in the matter of these pretentious cosmetics and drugs, which are compounded by ignorant impostors who care for nothing, provided only they make their profit. The ruling passion of the sex is too strong to combat: it would have been useless to talk to Narcissa, whose last words protested against the unbecomingness of a woollen shroud, or to that other great dame who exclaimed in dying, "Betty, give this cheek a little red!" Yet pomander is one thing and poison another, and we have dwelt upon the melancholy tale from Indiana in the faint hope that the fair, abroad and at home, may take to heart the sad picture of the poor girl who cast away those blue jewels of her eyes, and must live and die now in the darkness of an endless night, self-sought and self-incurred.

It was yesterday officially notified that the Queen will on Monday next proceed to Port Victoria, to meet the Empress Frederick of Germany. The Prince of Wales, as already notified, will proceed to Flushing, to receive her Imperial Majesty. On arrival at Port Victoria the Royal party will travel by special train to Windsor.

No successor to Sir Charles Warren has yet been definitively selected, but it is understood that the Government favour the appointment of a civilian to the office of First Commissioner; and it is sought to secure for the position some one who has had experience in the class of work specially devolving upon the police. The names of several gentlemen holding important posts in that connection in the counties and larger provincial towns have been brought prominently to the attention of the authorities, and the choice of the Home Office is likely to fall upon either Mr. Malcolm Wood, Chief Constable of Manchester, or the Chief of the Birmingham Police. The representatives of Lancashire, irrespective of party, support Mr. Wood. Yesterday that gentleman was summoned to town, and it is expected that he will be appointed to the First Commissionership in the course of the next few days.

Mr. Gladstone was present in the House of Commons last night for the first time since the opening of the autumn session. The right hon. gentleman, who arrived shortly before half-past three, was cheered by his supporters as he took his seat on the front Opposition bench between Mr. John Morley and Mr. Stansfeld. During a portion of the sitting the Marquis of Hartington and Sir Henry James occupied seats on the front Opposition bench. Mr. Goschen and Mr. Balfour, who had been absent on Monday, reappeared in their places on the Ministerial side. The general attendance of members did not exceed about 300—less than one half the full House. Considerable interest was manifested in Committee of Supply in the debate on the Supreme Court of Judicature vote, and the attack of Mr. Jennings, Conservative member for Stockport, on the extravagant salaries paid in the department, led to a rather close division, the Government having in the result a majority of only nineteen. Mr. Gladstone and the bulk of the Opposition voted with Mr. Jennings—who acted as teller with Mr. Lawson—as did also about a dozen Conservatives, including Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Hanbury, Mr. James Aird, Mr. Henniker-Heaton, Mr. E. Beckett, and Mr. Kelly. Others, it is understood, feeling that they could not conscientiously vote against Mr. Jennings, were induced to absent themselves from the division.

A strenuous opposition is being raised to the Government's proposed carrying-out of the Wheel and Van Tax. Last night a petition was circulated in the lobby among Conservative and Liberal Unionist members to vote against the measure whenever it again came before the House. Over a score of signatures were appended to the document during the evening, and the promoters of the opposition seem sanguine of bringing up the number to nearly forty names. The Scotch members are nearly unanimous against the proposal, and, with the help of the Opposition and those now pledged on the Conservative side to oppose the bill, it is generally thought the Government will have great difficulty in carrying it through. Notwithstanding the risk of defeat, the Government are determined to persevere in their attempt to pass the measure.

Several new amendments are being put down to the Van and Wheel Tax Bill. One of these, by Mr. J. R. Kelly, is to raise the weight of light carts, against which the tax is to be enforced, from ten hundredweight to twelve hundredweight, which will enable a large additional number of tradesmen's vehicles to escape the application of the Act.

The unusually protracted nature of the debates on the estimates, together with the wide range of subjects on which issue is now joined by the Opposition in discussing money votes, has led to the informal consideration on the part of several prominent members of the Government of further proposed amendments to the rules of the House of Commons. It is stated that at the present rate of progress the session cannot possibly be brought to a close before Christmas, and if the same methods are persisted in the whole time of every Parliament hereafter will be taken up solely with debates on the estimates. The Government are disinclined to resort to the use of the closure in discussing money votes, inasmuch that, whenever it is enforced, portions of the estimate that might to the public advantage be debated, are thereby cut off from being ventilated, together with those matters which are of little or no importance. A suggestion has therefore been made that some form of a three or five minutes' rule in discussing the votes should be adopted, so that no member other than whoever is in charge of the vote should be allowed to encroach, beyond that period, on the time of the House without express consent.

Last night a meeting was held, in one of the committee rooms, of members and others interested in the subject of the Navy, to discuss what joint action should be adopted in the debate on the estimates for that branch of the services. Among those present were Lord Charles Beresford, Mr. Hanbury, Admiral Mayne, Admiral Bethell, and others. It was intimated that when the navy estimates come on, probably in the course of the next fortnight, the members should insist on having an explanation as to the Government's shipbuilding programme for the next year; also that it having been generally admitted on all sides that the Navy is not up to a proper standard either in personnel or material, some definite scheme of having ships and men proportional to the actual requirements of the country should be forthwith adopted. Lord Charles Beresford and other members expressed the fear that the Government is apparently not yet fully alive to the really deplorable condition of the navy, and are losing invaluable time in not pushing forward the necessary preparations for rendering it efficient. Ultimately it was decided to raise the whole question of the state of the service, and the steps being now taken to strengthen it in accordance with national requirements. In the event of such a discussion being ruled out of order on Vote 8, it was further agreed to bring about a debate by moving the adjournment of the House for that purpose.

Parliamentary Business.—The House of Commons will meet at noon to-day to proceed with the further consideration of the Civil Service Estimates. The Lords' amendments to the Libel Law Amendment Bill are to be discussed, and Mr. Milvain proposes to ask a question as to the continued imprisonment of a man for a burglary of which another person has confessed himself guilty.

A new reorganisation scheme relating to the expense accounts at Chatham Dockyard has been brought into operation, Mr. C. N. Pearn being placed at the head of the department with a salary of £650 per annum. Several other junior appointments in connection with the new scheme are also ordered to be made at this dockyard.

A deputation of the holders of long and perpetuity leases in Ireland will to-morrow be introduced by Mr. T. W. Russell to Mr. A. J. Balfour, and on Friday to Lord Salisbury and Lord Hartington. The deputation, many of whom are from the South, have come to ask for the support of these statesmen and the Government to Mr. Russell's bill extending to their class—the occupying tenants—the provisions of Lord Ashbourne's Land Purchase Act.

Mr. John Bright.—A Rochdale correspondent telegraphs: "Acting on the advice of Dr. Hayle, Mr. Bright still keeps to his bed, as he has done for the past month. The right hon. gentleman is again the subject of a slight attack of bronchitis, but his general condition is considered to be quite satisfactory."

Royal Visit to Ealing.—Mr. E. M. Nelson, chairman of the Ealing Local Board, has received a communication from Sir Francis Knollys, to the effect that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales have fixed Dec. 15 as the date on which they will open the Ealing Jubilee Memorial Hall.

Home Secretaryship of Hyderabad.—The Nawab Mehdi Hassan, Chief Justice of Hyderabad, has been offered by telegraph and has accepted the important post of Home Secretary of the State. The Nawab, who is now in this country representing the Nizam's Government in the negotiations respecting the Deccan Mining concession, will, it is understood, resign the judicial appointment he now holds. The Home and Financial portfolios rank next to the Prime Ministership.

Board of Works Scandal.—At the Court of Aldermen yesterday, Sir W. Lawrence moved that a copy of the report issued by the Royal Commissioners at the close of the Board of Works inquiry be sent to the members as well as to the officers of the Court. It became his painful duty next, he said, to move that the report be sent to the Privileges' Committee for them to inquire into and report upon the statements which were contained therein.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Tuesday Night.

This afternoon Paris was enshrined in a semi-autumnal setting. Dawdlers on the Boulevards were numerous, and spent much time gazing in the windows of photographers and jewellers, or scanning the naughty numbers of the Vie Parisienne which were temptingly displayed in the kiosques of newspaper vendors. The smell of blood was still, however, in the air, and wherever you turned the talk was almost sure to be about Murder. With the accumulated horrors of the trials of Prado and Chambige, and the renewed rumours respecting the mysterious murderer of M. Barrème, comes the latest "Whitechapel atrocity," which is discussed as keenly by Parisians as if it had happened on the Boulevards. Jack the Ripper looms in the imagination as a more fearful scourge of humanity than Cardillac, the secret assassin in Hoffmann's tale, and the new "Mysteries of Paris" are beginning to pale before those of London.

The speech delivered by the Marquis de Breteuil at Marseilles, on Sunday, continues to be the subject of any amount of comment and discussion. The Marquis is generally believed to have spoken with authority, and to have reflected the views held by the Comte de Paris, and, of course, the Republicans are overjoyed at the attitude assumed by the Chief of the Royalist Party. The Republicans are almost unanimous in declaring that the Comte de Paris has compromised his cause irretrievably. They argue that it now matters little whether Comte Dillon did or did not confer with the "Pretender" in London last week. The Marquis de Breteuil, speaking in the name of the Comte de Paris, laid the Monarchy at the feet of General Boulanger; but the leading Opportunist organ declares that early in July both General Boulanger and Comte Dillon had interviews with the Marquis de Beauvoir, one of the right-hand men of the Comte de Paris. Then only a short time ago the Marquis de Breteuil and the Comte de Mun were present at the marriage of Mdlle. Boulanger with Captain Driant, so that for some months past there has been regular communication between prominent Royalists and General Boulanger. I have, however, frequently had occasion to point out that the Royalists are far from unanimous in approval of this alliance. The Duc d'Aumale, from the first, has been strongly opposed to such a course. Nearly all the Royalists in the Senate are of the same opinion as the Duc d'Aumale, and to-day we find M. de Baudry d'Asson writing to the editor of the Figaro to say that he is one of those who will never accommodate themselves to the "new situation" just developed by the Marquis de Breteuil. He declares boldly that it is not "chimerical" to hope that the day will come when France will rally to the Monarchy. In the lobbies of the Senate, this afternoon, M. Buffet stated that he thoroughly disapproved of the Marquis de Breteuil's speech.

The Chamber is getting rapidly through the Estimates. This afternoon it voted the Budgets of Foreign-Affairs, Interior, and Posts and Telegraphs almost without discussion. The debate that took place over the Foreign-Affairs Estimates will, however, interest your readers. M. Koechlin-Schwartz—General Boulanger's colleague in the Department of the Nord—appeared in the Tribune for the first time since his election, and for more than an hour read a speech in which he attacked the Foreign Office and its personnel in tones that were almost inaudible. The Right waxed furious when M. Goblet and the Committee's Rapporteur remarked innocently that they could not reply as they had hardly heard a word, and amid roars of laughter, M. Paul de Cassagnac suggested that M. Koechlin-Schwartz should be invited to read his speech all over again; but there was a change when M. de la Ferronays, a Conservative, declared that patriotism would prevent him from indulging in any criticism of M. Goblet's policy, which in any case had been sound in the main. The Minister for Foreign Affairs warmly thanked M. de la Ferronays, and said that he would imitate his reserve. Events which were passing around them deserved all their attention, but they could follow them calmly, as it was their duty to do. "France," continued M. Goblet, "threatens nobody. She is not preparing any remote expedition or any conquest. She contents herself with defending her rights, and she does so with firmness and wisdom." M. Goblet then remarked that the encouragement he had just received would assist him in the fulfilment of a very difficult task. "The Minister who is responsible for the foreign policy of this country ought always to safeguard the dignity of France, nor does he forget that peace abroad is an essential condition of progress and prosperity at home." The House cheered loudly, and the general discussion was closed. The Foreign Estimates were voted without interruption, the only exception being the usual motion for the suppression of the Vatican Embassy, which was brought forward by M. Ferroul. M. Goblet, while declaring that no Republican Government would help to restore the "Temporal Power," said that the Pope represented a moral force which played a great part in the World, and that the French Republic would not lose any of its credit in showing respect to this high moral power. Many of the Radicals protested—M. Clémenceau among the number—but M. Ferroul's amendment was rejected by 307 to 217 votes. M. Goblet's pacific declaration is especially worthy of note at a moment when another outcry is being raised over France's so-called warlike proclivities.

M. Maillard, Deputy for the Department of the Seine, intends laying a proposition before the Chamber to the effect that the ashes of Baudin, who was killed on the barricades during the fighting of the Deux Décembre, should be removed to the Panthéon on the anniversary of that eventful date. The remains of Baudin repose in the Montmartre Cemetery beneath a tomb on which the circumstances of his tragic death are related in monumental brass. M. Maillard's proposal will, in all probability, encounter strong opposition, at least on the Right of the House.

The Queen of Portugal visited M. Pasteur's establishment in the Rue Vauquelin this morning in company with the Duke of Oporto, and—like the Prince of Wales a few weeks ago—took a great deal of interest in the inoculation of the patients. Upwards of 150 persons were waiting in the courtyard leading to the laboratory, and when her Majesty arrived they all saluted her with every mark of respect. The first patient whom the Queen saw was an artilleryman, who gave a graphic account of his accident. M. Pasteur then explained his mode of treatment, and twenty people were afterwards passed in review. Among them was a little fellow seven years of age, who had been horribly bitten by a mad dog. He comes from the Department of the Corrèze, and was answering some questions in his native patois which the Queen had kindly put to him, when one of the gentlemen composing her escort fainted. He was promptly revived by the doctors present, and said that this was the first time he had been taken ill in this way. He thought that the surroundings might have something to do with his indisposition. In effect, the atmosphere is extremely trying to any one who is not initiated into these mysteries. A visit was then paid to the Pasteur Institute, in the Rue Dutot, which is to be formally opened to-morrow. M. Carnot has already expressed his intention of attending the inaugural ceremony, and he will be accompanied by M. Floquet, M. Lockroy, M. Pierre Legrand, and M. Peytral. The Queen of Portugal will probably be present, as well as the Russian Grand Dukes now in Paris. The busts of the principal subscribers to the Institute have been placed in the Hall where the ceremony is to take place. They are those of the Emperor of Russia, Madame Boucicaut, Madame Furtado Heine, and M. de Laubespin. To-morrow ought to be a proud day for M. Pasteur.

Miss Kathleen O'Meara—an authoress whose writings on French social and religious subjects are well known—has just died at her residence in the Rue Washington. Her last work, "Madame Mohl and her Friends," was translated into French under the title of "Le Salon de Madame Mohl," and was highly appreciated here. The deceased lady—as her name implies—was of Irish descent, and was a near relative of Barry O'Meara, who was with the First Napoleon at Saint Helena.

Women fainted to-day in the stifling atmosphere of the Assize Court of the Seine, and the doctor attached to the Palais had to attend them. Men were wiping the perspiration from their brows and looking with longing at the high windows of the Hall or the half-opened doors leading to corridors where gulps of cool air might be obtained. Everybody was literally fagged out, as the trial of Prado has now gone on for more than a week. To-day people were curious to hear the defence which Maitre Comby was to set up for his extraordinary and enigmatical client, whose condemnation to the extreme penalty of the law was yesterday called for by the Advocate-General. At the outset of his speech for the defence, Maitre Comby regretted that the tremendous strain which the trial had caused did not enable him to reply yesterday to the long and logical address of M. Sarrut. The Advocate-General had concluded his speech by declaring himself in favour of the abolition of "capital punishment." Maitre Comby would not give his opinion on such matters, but, if he were a supporter of "capital punishment," he would only apply it in cases wherein there was a material proof of guilt. In the Prado case there were no material proofs, but merely moral presumptions. The Advocate-General reproached the defence with having enveloped the murder of Marie Aguétant in dense mystery; but that could hardly be the case, since the prosecution had ten days and a legion of witnesses to elucidate this mystery. As to the secrecy surrounding the origin and antecedents of Prado, what did it matter if his client wished his real name to be unknown and even if it were made public would it clear matters up? Maitre Comby himself knew the prisoner's name, but all that he could tell the Jury was that if Europe learned to-morrow who the man was who was there sitting on the prisoner's bench charged with murder, there would run through the world a thrill of pity for a great but ill-fated person. Prado was an adventurer and a gambler, no doubt; and, like every unlucky gambler, he became careless, and received stolen property. There was, however, a vast difference between crimes of that description and murder. His client was of a loving description, and adored both Mauricette Couronneau and her child. The letters were there to prove it; but the jury should also remember that, amid all his adventures, amorous or otherwise, there was only question of one case of illicit love. Eugénie Forestier was, in fact, the only woman of bad reputation with whom the accused had associated. As to the evidence of the witnesses who identified Prado as the "little American" who had been to the Rue Caumartin on several occasions with Marie Aguétant, or who had been seen in her company at the Eden Theatre, such depositions could not be taken seriously. Brown overcoats of the café-au-lait tint were the fashion at the time of the Murder, and there must have been at least 500 men who wore overcoats of that colour at the Eden Theatre on the night of Marie Aguétant's death. What, therefore, was there to prove that Prado was the "little American" known to the murdered woman? Referring to the evidence of the persons who said that they identified Prado after a lapse of two years, the Jury should remember that Marie Aguétant's domestic servant declared that she was sure that an unfortunate provincial solicitor, who had been arrested in a cabinet particulier, wherein he was organising a series of little orgies, was the murderer. Judicial blunders were begotten of erroneous identifications, according to a well-known saying, and the jury were reminded by the law itself not to take for truth everything uttered by witnesses. Maitre Comby next referred to the inaccuracies respecting the hour at which the murder was committed. According to the testimony of a woman who lived close to Aguétant's rooms and was up all night by the bedside of a sick child, the murderer must have left the victim at ten minutes past one, and Prado was at Eugénie Forestier's before midnight. Madame Fontanier, the woman who was asked to identify Prado on her death-bed, could not do so, and it was a well-known fact that persons dying of consumption were never more clear in intellect and more sure in memory than at the approach of death. Where, then, were the material proofs of Prado's guilt? As to psychological indications, if it were necessary to refer to them in the case, did not the Jury think that a man who was really guilty would betray himself, make a slip in some way, or break down after so many hours and days of inquisitorial torture, accusation, and suspense? Counsel then proceeded to denounce Eugénie Forestier as an infamous woman who wanted to have revenge at any price, and to parade herself in the Assize Court like the girl Blin, the mistress of Marchandon. Maitre Comby concluded by making the usual pathetic appeal to the Jury on behalf of Prado's little daughter, and he implored them not to allow the head of the accused to fall at the feet of a harlot who would receive it with smiles.

Eugénie Forestier was visibly disconcerted at this attack, and hid her face from the concentrated gaze of the Court. She was relieved, however, when her counsel, Maitre Danet, stood up to champion her cause. The advocate first denied the complicity of his client in the Royan robbery, and then proceeded to show that she really loved Prado; that she might have communicated her secret about the murder after Prado had threatened her in Bordeaux; and, finally, that it was Forestier to whom the prisoner wrote for assistance, and whom he asked to leave France. Forestier's depositions were accurate from beginning to end, and she had taken nothing from the newspapers. Coming to the question about the "red reticule," which was among the pièces de conviction, and caused so much complication, Maitre Danet said that it was found in Marie Aguétant's room at five o'clock on the morning after the murder by the police-magistrate, who had been sent for. Marie Aguétant's friends did not know this sac rouge: they only knew a sac noir, but such was the history of the former article. There was not a word about the "red reticule" in the newspapers, yet Eugénie Forestier was able to tell all about it, and how it had been cut with a razor, together with the bank notes in it. That showed that Forestier did not lie when she described what Prado told her about the murder in a moment of confidence. When Prado was in prison he wrote most affectionately to Forestier, calling her his blondinette, and asking her to save him. There was applause in court when Maitre Danet finished his speech, which was a second and even more sensational edition of the requisitoire of the Advocate-General. The mystery of the sac rouge had at last been cleared up, and another telling point had been made against the prisoner. Prado looked uncomfortable, and took notes as usual, when he said that the wind was against him. The trial will, after all, be still prolonged, and to-morrow Prado is to make his own defence.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 82f 97½c (a fall of 2½c); Four and a Half per Cents., 101f 65c (a fall of 2½c); Italians, 96f 72½c (a fall of 12½c); Turks, 15f 40c (a fall of 30c); Spanish Exteriors, 73f 15c; Egyptian Unified, 410f; ditto Preference, 508f 25c; and Ottoman Bank, 530f. Suez Canal shares closed at 2,230f, and Rio Tinto at 677f. There was a slight drop to-day in Home Funds, but foreign stocks generally were decidedly weak. Besides the falls in Italians, Turks, Russians, and Portuguese, Spanish Exteriors lost 20c, Egyptian Unified 1f 25c, and ditto Preference 1f 75c, and Suez Canal shares 2f 50c. On the Petite Bourse to-night prices left off as follows: Three per Cents., 82f 95c; Italians, 96f 77c; Turks, 15f 47c; Spanish Exteriors, 73 7-32f; Egyptian Unified, 410f 31c; Ottoman Bank, 530f; and Rio Tinto, 678f 75c.

GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Nov. 13.

Kaiserin Friedrich will leave Berlin for England next Saturday.

Prince Henry of Prussia left Kiel this morning for Copenhagen to represent his brother, Kaiser Wilhelm, at the Royal festivities in honour of the King at the Danish capital.

The Czarewitch passed through Berlin this morning en route for Copenhagen, only remaining a short time at the station, where he was met by Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, and the Staff of the Embassy.

Count de Benomar's recall has opened a political question of some importance. In contradiction to the misinformed account contained in the columns of a London contemporary, the Cologne Gazette semi-officially confirms what I told you some days ago. The Count's recall is due exclusively to the policy of the new Minister at the Madrid Foreign Office, as Count de Benomar was always favourable to Germany and Austria, and his successor, the Marquis de la Vega de Armijo, is distinctly more disposed to be friendly to France. The Government of Germany has certainly taken umbrage at the rapprochement between Spain and France, and it remains to be seen how far the Marquis will succeed at his post.

Mr. Pendleton, the American Minister, is better in health, and has been given leave of absence, which he will spend in Nice. It is believed that he will soon be replaced.

THE KING OF WÜRTEMBERG.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

STUTTGART, Nov. 13.

The Official Gazette announces that Messrs. Woodcock and Savage and their companions have left the entourage of King Charles of their own free will, and that his Majesty will always bear in mind the services which the first-named rendered him during his illness in 1884.

The Gazette declares further that Baron Woodcock never took part in Spiritualistic experiments, and denies that the Ministers ever sent in their resignations or contemplated taking such a step. On the other hand, they informed the King that an application had been made for legal proceedings against the disseminators in Munich and Stuttgart of the false reports referred to, and requested his Majesty's views as to how they should act in the matter. The King, in reply, ordered them to abstain from legal proceedings.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Nov. 13.

Considerable irritation prevails in business circles here at what is regarded as the provocation given by the North German Gazette to France. Trade and finance are unfavourably affected by these constant alarms in the German official press, and it is well to observe that they do not find the faintest echo in the Austrian newspapers. If most people in this country are inclined to think that Germany desires peace, there is certainly nobody who believes that France is bent on war. All the Great Continental Powers continue arming, and only a fortnight ago the Austrian Government ordered more Maxim guns.

The Germans are manufacturing an entirely new weapon, concerning which the greatest secrecy is observed, but its destructive power is said to exceed anything yet invented. The French could not remain idle if they would, and it is puerile to complain of their activity. Even in the best-informed circles here people are lost in conjecture as to what can be the object of screaming from the housetops that if peace is disturbed it will be the fault of France, precisely at a moment when the attitude of the French people is eminently pacific.

I have the best reason to believe that not a single fact has come to the knowledge of any foreign Government indicating bellicose intentions on the part of France. In view of the coming Exhibition, the French Government and people are naturally anxious to avoid all diplomatic friction and conflicts.

Europe is only immediately threatened in one quarter, and that is by the massing of Russian troops on the Austrian frontier.

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Nov. 13.

No confirmation has been received here of the reported attempt on the life of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. A telegram from Sofia says his Royal Highness has received intimation that a conspiracy is being hatched at Constantinople by Bulgarian refugees against himself and his Government.

Owing to the intense cold sport at Godöllö has hitherto been indifferent. The Emperor confines himself to the pheasant preserves in a neighbouring forest, whither his Majesty proceeds soon after daybreak, driving there and back in an open carriage, attired in an ordinary shooting costume of Tyrolese homespun, without encumbering himself with furs or wraps of any kind.

The Vienna newspapers reproduce, almost in extenso, The Daily Telegraph's account of the "Whitechapel murder." That atrocious crime has made a profound sensation in Vienna, but there can be no doubt that had such a series of crimes been perpetrated in this country without detection the highest officials of State would have been called to account. The announcement that bloodhounds would be used on the next occasion to track the assassin has excited considerable interest in Austria, where the opinion amongst fanciers is that the experiment would probably prove successful.

A fire broke out yesterday evening in the ancient Castle of Libenwerda, near Halle. The medical practitioner of the district, who occupied a wing of the building, was burned to death, together with his wife, their infant child, and two maidservants.

SLAVERY IN AFRICA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Nov. 13.

The Note sent by Count Hatzfeldt to Lord Salisbury on Nov. 3, and the English Premier's reply, dated Nov. 5, which were the result of the negotiations between the two Governments on the arrangements to be adopted on the East Coast of Africa, are published in to-night's Official Gazette. As they were to be published in London also to-day I need not reproduce them, but merely note that they fully confirm what appeared some days ago in The Daily Telegraph.

Most ridiculous misconceptions of the line the German Government intends taking are finding their way into the English papers, as well as much wild talk about the enlistment of mercenaries from India for German purposes. I am forced again to repeat that the German Government has not the slightest intention of bolstering up the German East-African or any other Company in that part of Africa. Protection will be afforded to subjects of the Empire, and care will be taken that due respect shall be paid to the national flag, but the Government of the Kaiser is not responsible for the failure of a mercantile speculation. In fact, nothing else is being aimed at except what is mentioned in the Notes above referred to—the prevention of the export of slaves and the import of arms and ammunition of war.

The double-screw aviso "Pfeil" has been put into commission with orders to sail for Zanzibar, and will leave this week. She is a new vessel of 2,700 horse-power, 1,328 tons displacement, and sails at a speed of seventeen knots. She carries five twelve centimètre guns and a corresponding number of revolver-cannons.

ADDRESS TO THE POPE.

Signed by the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster and the Catholic prelates of England, the following address has been sent to his Holiness Pope Leo XIII.:

Most Holy Father—The undersigned Bishops of England have learnt with great sorrow and indignation that new laws have been proposed and are about to be carried in the Italian Parliament against the bishops, the clergy, and the faithful of Italy, under the pretext of repressing attacks against authority, whether by word or by writing. The authority to be protected by these laws is the authority of a revolution, that by violence has possessed itself of the city of Rome. Henceforth, whosoever shall venture to write or to speak in defence of the rights of the Holy See, and of the Catholic world, is to be punished by fine and imprisonment. There is no exception made in favour of any person, howsoever eminent or sacred may be his dignity. The venerable and Sovereign person of your Holiness, whose absolute liberty in the exercise of your Primacy over the Catholic world was said to be guaranteed, is not exempted from these penal laws. To proclaim to the people of Christendom that Rome is the capital of the Catholic world will be an offence against the authority which by force has established itself within its walls, and would be a contravention of those laws. That which is lawful to all Catholics throughout the world in every free nation will henceforth be unlawful only in Italy, and, above all, for those whose rights are despised and violated.

We, who live in a land where the Catholic Church enjoys full liberty, are profoundly aggrieved and offended at seeing the injustice and the violence with which the sacred rights of the Head of the Church are obstructed and violated in the very centre and in the very seat of its supreme authority. Already the filial devotion of all Catholic pastors and people in all parts of the world, and also the free and healthy public opinion of all civilised nations, has rebuked and condemned this penal legislation. And we also add our protest to that of the civilised world, declaring, together with all Catholics, our detestation of such great injustice. We offer fervent prayers to the Divine Head of the Church, that He may bring to naught these and all other attempts against the liberty and independence of His Vicar upon earth, and we humbly implore for ourselves and for England the Apostolical Benediction.

SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTS.

By a happy combination the Society of Architects last night united pleasure with business, making their meeting at the New Gallery, Regent-street, at once a conversazione, a concert, and the occasion for the inaugural address of the president, Mr. W. Howard Seth-Smith. Commencing a wide survey of professional interests, artistic and material, with a congratulation, which was warmly cheered, that "no member of this society was in any way implicated in the recent disclosures of the Metropolitan Board of Works," Mr. Seth-Smith ventured on the anticipation that, as science has well-nigh absorbed the energies of mankind for half a century, art is now to have her day, and of the arts especially architecture, one of the most useful. He had not cherished the ideal of one national English style; architectural art must henceforth be a thing of fashion; but a well-informed taste would reject as unsuited to our genius and climate many styles now pitchforked into our midst. Strongly the President urged the registration and compulsory qualification of architects. Coming to material topics, Mr. Seth-Smith noticed the advance in the use of terra-cotta, of glazed bricks, of faience work, of steel for joists, and pumice-concrete for fireproof floorings, and then passed to the subject of electric lighting, which must continue, he said, to make fresh demands on the skill of the designer. Incidentally it was observed as a sign of returning prosperity that there has been a rise in building materials, averaging about 12 per cent., but this it was stated does not represent an increase on the total cost of buildings of more than 2½ per cent. In conclusion, the President hoped in the coming session they might do something to help forward the movement for establishing chairs of architecture in the universities and colleges of England. The concert consisted of vocal and instrumental music by S. Mark's Choral Society, Madame Isabel George, Miss Rose Dafforne, Mr. Sydney Marsland, and Mr. G. A. Middleton.

Last night's Gazette contains the following: Captain George L. Holford, 1st Life Guards, has been seconded on appointment as Extra Equerry to Field-Marshal his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G., K.T., K.P.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Piccadilly-circus.

MESSRS. J. J. ORGILL, SWANN, and ORGILL respectfully announce that, pursuant to instructions from Mr. J. H. Barnes (who is anxious to curtail his commercial transactions), they will submit to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at MASONS' HALL TAVERN, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-street, City, on TUESDAY, Nov. 27, at twelve for one o'clock precisely, the BENEFICIAL LEASE and valuable GOODWILL, with possession, of those well-known business premises, fully licensed, as the PICCADILLY RESTAURANT, situate at the corner of Shaftesbury-avenue and Piccadilly-circus, confessedly one of the most renowned trade positions in the metropolis. Only a brief sketch of its specialities is necessary to justify the highest encomiums. Placed at the junction of six most important thoroughfares at the West-end, creating an enormous and incessant foot traffic, and radiating to all the cardinal points of the compass, also contiguous to numerous colossal retail emporiums, and likewise being surrounded by several popular theatres and places of public amusement, all conspire to place this property in the foremost rank of similar establishments. In its erection cost appears to have been but a subsidiary consideration, for therein is a happy blend of the useful with the elegant, as in its elevation and construction professional skill and practical knowledge are equally developed. The locality being in a transition state, the present returns, which are very extensive and unusually lucrative, only foreshadow what they must inevitably be when the district is more matured. Held by lease for an unexpired term of 77 years, at the nominal rent of £350 per annum. Note.—The details of the trade may be inspected by principals or their agents at the Auctioneers' offices any morning up to one o'clock. A great portion of the purchase-money may remain on a first mortgage at 5 per cent. interest for a term of years.—The premises may be viewed by cards, and printed particulars and conditions of sale obtained on the premises; at Masons' Hall; of Messrs. Bowman and Crawley, Henry, Solicitors, 21, Bedford-row, W.C.; and at the Auctioneers' offices, 21, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, W.C.

Important Sale of Furniture.—25, Kensington Park-gardens, W. (midway between Notting-hill and Notting-hill-gate stations).—The well-manufactured and elegant modern Furniture and Effects, comprising eight complete bed-room suites in American walnut, ash, and Spanish mahogany, with pedestal duchesse tables and large wardrobes with plate-glass doors, superior mattresses, [illegible]

ALL who keep horses should never be without RUMNEY'S FOOD. Directions: Mix a small quantity of Rumney's Food into nearly half a pail of cold water, stirring at the same time. It is then ready for use. Horses taking Rumney's Food never require medicine, but always keep in perfect health. Each packet of Rumney's Food contains far more nourishment than a feed of corn. Box of 36 packets, 5s.—Cash with order, cheque payable to P. J. RUMNEY, the Royal Food Mills, London, N., Eng.

THE WONDER COACH.

With gladsome hearts and faces bright,
We gaily take our seats,
And quick the well-appointed coach
Rolls through the London streets.
And soon the open country's gained
With meads and pastures fair,
And timbered parks with spreading oaks
Fine landscapes rich and rare.
Of mettle prime the teams are formed,
Pick of a famous stud;
Of quality and strength are they,
Combining bone and blood.
Their high condition and their health
Are always wondrous good,
Arising from the fact they
Are fed with "Rumney's Food."
Our minds revert to glorious times,
Old England's happy days,
When Englishmen passed English life
In good old English ways.
We're minded of the olden time,
Ere we knew steam or rail,
When staring rustics viewed with awe
The flying "Royal Mail."
Thanks to the owner we ascribe,
For we can proudly say
The "Wonder" shows admiring crowds
Old English style to-day.
Then all who love old English style,
As holidays approach,
Take my advice and in advance
Book by the "Wonder Coach."

DEDICATED TO ENGLAND'S NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE.
By H. HAWKINS. Post free, 2s.
Keys F (A to D) and G (B to E).

We are the sturdy sons of old Britannia,
Whose ocean rule there's no one can deny,
Old England, Queen of ev'ry water,
Proud in peace, yet there's none dare thee defy!
Thy sailors at thy call stand ever ready,
Our Motherland, to live or die for thee;
While Britons breathe, Britannia must be ruler
Of the waves, the Mistress of the sea.
Chorus (ad lib).
Pull then together, tars, for England,
Pull for the land we love so well;
The Union Jack floats for freedom,
And tells us of those who fighting fell.
In days gone by, when our Old Britannia
Was threatened on the land and on the sea,
She called—her valiant children answered—
As bravely, as loudly answer we.
That hour when fierce foemen press thy borders,
Loved England, will you ever find us true,
For our country and our kindred we are ready,
Daring all—even death were sweet for you!
Repeat Chorus.

ORSBORN and TUCKWOOD'S NEW WALTZ.
Forget Me Not. The prettiest waltz of the season.
Forget Me Not. The prettiest waltz of the season.
Forget Me Not. The prettiest waltz of the season.

FORGET ME NOT WALTZ. By FLORENCE FARE.
Considering the never-ending flow of new waltzes into the music market, and the strong family likeness between all, or most of them, it may seem difficult to select any one of such compositions for special praise. But Florence Fare's

FORGET ME NOT WALTZ
will be found worthy of far more than mere passing notice. Among its many sterling qualities will be observed one rarely met with in waltzes of the day, viz., it is written up to its title. The touching plea contained in the three words

FORGET ME NOT will find its way straight to the hearts of all who have heard or danced to its soft and clinging melodies. It pleads for remembrance, and it certainly shall not be forgotten. It may well be said of

that it possesses the magic power which, according to the elder Strauss, is the chief attribute of a really good set of waltzes. That king of waltz-writers once said that the first number should unseal the lips of the most timid lover; the second should dispel, as clouds before the summer breeze, all the doubts and fears of the coyest maiden; and, ere the last strains of the finale have died away, the one soft word that binds two hearts for ever shall have been whispered.

FORGET ME NOT WALTZ
Will achieve all this, and more, for its fresh and winning melodies come as welcome relief, after the humdrum, "rule-of-thumb" ditties which do duty as modern waltz music.

FORGET ME NOT. By FLORENCE FARE.
Undoubtedly the Waltz of the season.
Beautifully Illustrated.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS.
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT,
RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and NEURALGIA.
The excruciating pain is quickly relieved and cured in a few days by this celebrated medicine.
These pills, which are perfectly harmless, require no restraint of diet during use, and prevent the disease attacking any vital part.—Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

CAUTION.—STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDER for CHILDREN CUTTING their TEETH.—The proprietor feels it necessary to give a special caution against IMITATIONS of this old-established family medicine, some of which in outward appearance so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers, and for their own security it is requisite for them carefully to observe in every case that the words "John Steedman, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey," are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to each packet, without which they are not genuine.

ASTHMA.—JOY'S CIGARETTES give immediate RELIEF in the worst attack of Asthma, Cough, Chronic Bronchitis, and Shortness of Breath. Persons who suffer at night with coughing, phlegm, and short breath find them invaluable, as they instantly check the spasm, promote sleep, and allow the patient to pass a good night. They are perfectly harmless, and may be smoked by ladies, children, and most delicate patients. In boxes of 35 Cigarettes, 2s. 6d., from all Chemists and Stores. Each genuine box bears the name, Wilcox and Co., 239, Oxford-street, London. Post free.

FITS, Epilepsy or Falling Sickness.—The undersigned is prepared to send gratis a permanent cure for all kinds of fits.—Write to-day to Mr. Williams, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London, for a free case. Be cured and happy.

PERSONS who SUFFER from a chronic inflammatory condition of the mucous membrane, periodically assuming an acute aspect in the form of COUGH, Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Asthma, will find POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED a friend indeed.—Sold by Chemists throughout the world, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. per bottle. See Trade Mark, "Lion, Net, and Mouse." Established 70 years.

CAUTION.—Only articles possessing some special and acknowledged excellence are worth imitating; and the unprecedented success of POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED has induced dishonest traders to defraud the public with utterly worthless imitations. In order, therefore, to protect the public against such fraudulent imitations, the well-known Trade Mark—"Lion, Net, and Mouse"—is conspicuously printed on the wrapper of every bottle of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, and any imitation of the same is forgery and a breach of the law relating to trade marks.

POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED.—The high character of this old-established remedy for Pulmonary and Bronchial Disorders is repeatedly confirmed by the gratifying letters received from those who have experienced its great worth. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE admitted by thousands to be worth above a Guinea a Box for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fulness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. The first dose will give relief in 20 minutes. This is no fiction, for they have done it in thousands of cases. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these pills and they will be acknowledged to be WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
For females of all ages these pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all gross humours, open all obstructions, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.
For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver they act like magic, and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite, and arouse into action, with the rosebud of health, the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are facts admitted by thousands, embracing all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is Beecham's Pills have the largest sale of any Patent medicine in the world.
Full directions are given with each box. Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers in the United Kingdom.
Prepared only and sold wholesale and retail by the Proprietor, T. Beecham, Chemist, St. Helen's, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each. Sent post free for 15 or 36 stamps.
